Sees Education as War Preventive; Discusses Teacher Problems.

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt said, in an address to the Nation last night, that "only through constant education and the stressing of the ideals of peace" can those nations threatening the peace of the world by "imperialistic desires" be brought into line with the majority against such a policy.

Addressing the thrid annual Women's Conference on Current Problems in New York from the oval room on the first floor of the White House, Mr. Roosevelt stressed the need of further reduction in the cost of local government by "good business methods and the elimination of the wrong kind of politics." He asserted the quality of teaching in almost every State could be "definitely and distinctly raised."

Cites Two Problems.

Noting the conference was discussing the "Crisis in History," the President said there were "two problems which can be helped by public interest and public discussion"—the peace of the world and education as it has been affected by the depression.

"The danger to world peace," he said, "certainly does not come from the United States of America. As a nation, we are overwhelming against engaging in war. As a nation, we are seeking no additional territory at the expense of our neighbors.

"The United States does not seek to annex Canada or any part thereof, to annex Mexico or any part thereof, or to annex Cuba or any part thereof.

"It is this attitude of the overwhelming majority of our people toward their neighbors—this complete lack of a national desire for territorial expansion which makes the rest of the world begin to understand that the United States is opposed to war."

Majority Wants Peace.

The President said a "very great majority of the inhabitants of the world feel the same as we do about territorial expansion or getting rich or powerful at the expense of their neighbors," and that it was "only in the case of such people in the world as still have imperialistic desires

WILLIAM E. DODD, American Ambassador to Germany, who last night began a long-deferred conference with Foreign Minister Von Neurath regarding Nazi assaults on Americans.

Cabinet, in Long Session, Believed to Be Standing Firm on Equality.

U.S. Envoy Demands Nazi Attackers of Nationals Be Punished.

Berlin, Oct. 13 (AP).—The German cabinet remained in session all day today and far into the night as the Hitler government faced what was considered the greatest crisis in the history of disarmament.

While the cabinet met in intimate session, with only the chancellor and the inner circle of ministers present at a so-called "chiefs" meeting, American Ambassador William E. Dodd began a long-deferred conference with Foreign Minister Von Neurath regarding Nazi assults on Americans.

Amabassador Dodd said "the matter is in the process of a solution which I think will be satisfactory," but declined to discuss any other developments.

Will Demand Equality.

No communique was issued after the cabinet session, but instructions issued to Dr. Rudolf Nadolny, German delegate to the Geneva Disarmament Conference, are most likely to insist that the powers recognize Germany's equality claims as emphatically and repeated set forth on behalf of the Hilter government.

Discussing Dr. Nadolny's arrival from Geneva, an inspired press said a "new situation confronts Germany." The newspaper Der Reichsbote undisguisedly warned:

"If a covenant is drawn up that brings for Germany no equality and for others no disarmament, then foreign nations need not wonder that such a document will not be taken seriously by Germany. Those powers responsible for making recognition of Germany's claims impossible must suffer the consequences."

Cabinet to Reconvene.

It was semiofficially announced that Dr. Nadolny will remain in Berlin probably until Monday, instead of returning to Geneva today as previously contemplated. The cabinet did not finish its deliberations on disarmament tonight and will resume them tomorrow.

The arms impasse arose from Germany's determination to be granted the right to free and equal arms negotiations at Geneva in the face of a reported resolution that Germany must not be allowed to rearm.

The semiofficial Diplomatische Korrespondenz branded the disarmament convention proposal a "withdrawal from the principle of equality as fixed in a five-power agreement," and asserted:

"It is incompatible with the principle of international politics if, as certain powers are openly attempting, they want to effect a 'disarmament covenant' which with many words seeks to veil the obvious fact that the highest armed powers refuse to undertake even the slightest steps toward disarmament.

Grave Apprehensions.

"With grave apprehension Germany observes these methods which already have led to an intensification of the situation.

"A prolonging of this state is most likely to jeopardize the cause of disarmament."

The Korrespondenz emphasized the readiness with which German statesmen have participated in the Geneva discussions and declared success would be possible only if the "basic demands of a real and general disarmament and honest equality are fulfilled."

Hull Message Delivered.

Ambassador Dodd gave the German foreign minister a message from Secretary of State Hull, inquiring as to the prosecution of the Nazi offenders against Ameri-

Fowler, Head of U. S. Gypsum Co., Accused of Mail Fraud.

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—John W. Fowler, chairman of the executive committee of the United States Gypsum Co., was indicted with eight other men today on charges of using the mails to defraud in the sale of $330,000 in stock in four hotels and apartment buildings now in receivership.

Indicted with Fowler were his brother, Clarence, Scranton, Pa.; Elbert O. Smith, New York; J. Stanley Conroy, New York; Andrew C. Thompson, Elmhurst, a Chicago suburb; John S. Buckworth, Edward M. Miller and Howard S. Ivie, all of Chicago, and Walter I. Beam, Wilmette, Ill., a former officer of the Farmers National Grain Corporation and the Grain Stabilization Corporation.

Eight counts in the indictment alleged misrepresentation and fraud. Specifically the indictment cited an alleged overestimation of revenue of the buildings by 50 per cent, and a similar underestimation of operating and other expenses. The four Chicago buildings have an aggregate estimated value of $4,000,000.

Bonds were set at $10,000 each for John Fowler, Beam and Thompson. The others were held in $5,000 bonds each.

Dynamite Bomb Hurled At Bank Proves "Dud"

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—A dynamite bomb powerful enough to blow up a city block was tossed on the doorstep of a South Side currency exchange today, but failed to explode.

Six half sticks of dynamite were found wrapped in adhesive tape and brown paper, with three percussion caps. The manager of the currency exchange said he knew of no motive for an attack.

Two Men Dying In Ship Blast

Five Missing as Flames Sweep Piers at Oil Plant.

Bayonne, N. J., Oct. 13 (AP).—Two men were burned critically and five were reported missing tonight in a fire that started with an explosion in a gasoline launch, setting ablaze two piers and four lighters at the Standard Oil Co.'s plant. The fire barely missed igniting three tankers and a freighter.

The injured men, Arne Kolvjornsen and Magnus Kleppe are in a hospital. Police said they were not expected to live.

Simultaneously with the fire came an explosion. Others followed as one after another of 35 drums of alcohol blew up.

The flames were visible for miles along the New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City and Staten Island waterfronts.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 13 (Spl.). The Third Congressional District Republican executive committee, meeting at Weston, called a convention in Clarksburg October 27 to nominate a candidate for representative at the special election November 28 to elect a successor to the late Lynn S. Hornor, of Clarksburg.

Magisterial conventions were called for 2 p. m. October 25 in each of the 10 counties to select delegates to the district convention. Apportionment was changed from 1 delegate to each 200 votes cast at the last election for governor to 1 delegate for each 100 votes.

Lynn Maple Brannon, of Weston, was chosen district chairman and Mrs. O. S. Talbott, of Buckhannon, district secretary, to serve until the Clarksburg convention.

$6.40 Rum Tax Favored By Treasury

Levy Expected to Bring $250,000,000 First Year of Repeal.

Experts Ready to Submit Report on Sales Problems.

Treasury officials are expected to recommend a tax rate of $6.40 a gallon on domestic distilled spirits in a report to be submitted to President Roosevelt as the result of a comprehensive survey of problems of control and taxation arising from repeal of pronibition.

The President's advisers, including representatives of the Departments of State, Justice, Commerce and the Treasury, were said yesterday at the White House to have completed a tentative schedule of rates for liquor tax legislation to be proposed to Congress.

While those engaged in the study of a proper rate sought a middle course between taxation sufficiently high to bring in much-needed revenue and a rate which, if too high, would drive consumers to bootleggers, the prevailing sentiment, according to Treasury advise, was in favor of the war-time figure of $6.40 a gallon.

District Status Problem.

Coincidental with announcement of the survey's completion came word from the White House that one of the most difficult problems arising from repeal is that of the status of the District of Columbia. The Attorney General is working on the question of whether Washington will be wet or dry after December 5, when the ratification of repeal by the thirty-sixth State is anticipated.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Dean Acheson and his confreres who drew up the Treasury Department's portion of the survey compute the highest revenue they believe can be expected in the first year of legal drinking, even with a $6.40 tax rate, as $250,000,000 from domestic distilled liquor and $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 in duties on imported wines, whiskies and brandies.

Report Photostated.

The Treasury officials had their report photostated and ready for submission yesterday, with all the laws which the Department would be called upon to administer—taxes, tariff, etc.—mobilized into one thick sheaf of documents. Each section of each law was set down separately, with opinions of the Department's experts on whether it would continue or die automatically

Siam Rebels Near Capital

Bangkok Tense as Forces Close in; Artillery Fire Begun.

Bangkok, Siam, Oct. 13 (AP).—The big guns of government troops were turned tonight on two provincial rebel forces that were moving on this tense capital.

Many feared the fighting would spread within the city. A number of business and commercial houses were closed and foreign banks and legations closely guarded.

Suburban residents were asked by the government to leave their homes when it was learned that the rebels, one group of which was commanded by a member of the royal family, were within 8 miles of the city.

Censorship was established here and communications were paralyzed because of the rebellion. Martial law continued in effect.

The other two brothers live at Winterbourne.

Labor Votes For Boycott On Germany

Criticizes "Some NRA Officials;" Insists on Right to Strike.

After pledging its family of 20,000,000 to boycott German goods and services, throwing its powerful lobby behind a legislative campaign to obtain sweeping reforms for Government employes, and criticizing "some officials of the NRA" for "undermining standards of living," the American Federation of Labor last night ended its fifty-third annual convention.

The end found President William Green reasserting his organization's independence and defending the right to strike as a last resort.

"We have listened to the President," he said, "to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Recovery Administrator, and to Senator Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board.

Insists on Strike Rights.

"We have heard strikes repeatedly denounced, even to hearing them called 'economic sabotage'—(Johnson's characterization) — but we have answered that as long as there is freedom in America the right to strike is inviolable."

Green had battered down revolts against his conservatism, he had brought harmony to sessions which sporadically were turbulent with distrust, and he still was proud.

"We have voted full support to the Recovery Administration," he continued, "but we have refused to extend that approval to its mistakes. We have criticized as freely as we have espoused, and therein lies the great value of our support. It is not the support of a 'yes man' government. We remain the masters of our own movement.

"Like a disciplined movement we have taken our votes and the majority rules for us all. That is the difference between a movement and a mob. It would be well for employers to take notice of that fact. To all industrial American labor offers the cooperation of a disciplined movement, as against the antiunionists' ideal of a mob or disunited individualism.

Asks Fair Judgment.

"We have given notice to the Nation that we will resent injustice, and if there is to be condemnation, let it be visited upon those who perpetrate injustice, not upon those seeking to correct it. We ask Americans to be fair in judging American wage-earners, 10,000,000 of whom remain jobless as the penalty for the terrible maladministration of employers."

It was in this spirit that the A. F. of L. authorized its lobby to fight for reforms for Government employes after the chairman of its legislative committee, Ira M. Ormburn, a member of the Federal Tariff Commission, and E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, had administered stinging rebuke to the Government for the treatment accorded workers.

Censure Government.

Ormburn declared the Government was "niggardly" in its treatment of employers, that it seeks to curtail its workers' pay and retain long hours when it is appealing to industry to do just the opposite in

I. C. C. Bars Astor From Rail Board

(Associated Press.)

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday refused William Vincent Astor permission to serve as director of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad Corporation, because he is now a director of the Great Northern Railway Co. and of the Illinois Central Railroad Co.

The commission reminded that if the proposed consolidated systems were to perform their functions properly, they must be independent.

Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie dissented, holding there is no relationship between the three roads, and that for Astor to serve all three would not reduce competition.

Movie Pay Curbed by Clause Tentatively Put in Film Code

Reputed fabulous salaries of filmdom's stars yesterday drew a proviso into the motion picture code.

A clause to prevent payment of unreasonable salaries was tentatively inserted into the movie charter by Deputy Administrator Sol Rosenblatt.

Meanwhile, taking note of reports that President Roosevelt had singled out individuals for salary criticism, the White House yesterday emphasized the President had carefully avoided mention of Jackie Coogan's remuneration.

It was stated the President's reference to salaries of "immature" actors was intended to refer to new stars, not to juveniles.

As officials sought to finish the movie code and others, NRA moved to take stock. Formal questionnaires asking for information on new jobs and pay roll expansion will be distributed today to employers.

The salary clause in the film code would give authorities power to investigate agreements between producers and actors.

If a producer is found to offer unreasonable salaries, an assessment may be imposed on the offender. Penalty is limited to $10,000.

As the White House issued guarded statements and the deputy administrator wrote his salary-clipping clause, Hugh S. Johnson, NRA's chief, said he saw no way by which the code could provide a limitation on maximum stipends when the law mentions only minimums.

Nevertheless, he said he intended to ask producers to submit their salary lists, either to himself or the President, for confidential consideration.

Labor Department Will Decide on Basis of Labor Wars.

Hopkins Approval Seen as Drive Is Pushed to Bring Peace.

(Associated Press.)

The Roosevelt Administration, it was disclosed last night, is preparing to halt distribution of Federal relief to strikers if Department of Labor investigators report the strikes unjustified.

An agreement has been reached with Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator, it was stated upon high authority, whereby if the Department of Labor informs him that a strike lacks justification, or is led by irresponsible parties, Federal relief could be withheld.

It was said that Federal investigators and conciliators are now looking into all major strikes in this light.

Relief Never Halted.

An administration official said he knew of no instances thus far where Hopkins had ordered relief held up or withdrawn, but that there would be no hesitation to take this step if it was shown definitely that a strike was without proper basis.

In some instances, it was disclosed, Department of Labor conciliators actually have taken a hand in helping distribute Government-provided food and clothing to men and women made destitute by strikes.

Rumors that President Roosevelt had telegraphed Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania that Federal relief might be held up in that State unless there was improvement in the strike situation were met at the White House tonight with statements from Presidential secretaries that they had no knowledge of Mr. Roosevelt calling the governor about any matter.

Thousands Affected.

Among thousands of workers in many sections of the country who remained idle as labor mediators sought the solution of their differences with employers were machinists, automobile workers, coal miners, garment workers, sardine fishermen and cotton pickers. Some of the strikes were marked by violence.

The National Labor Board announced it would hold a hearing next Wednesday morning on the Detroit, Flint and Pontiac, Mich.,

Douglas Acts To Cut New Groups' Pay

Order Ready to Be Signed by President; Slashes 15 Per Cent.

An executive order placing the 15 per cent pay cut in effect in the Government's new emergency agencies has been drafted by Budget Director Douglas and awaits only the signature of the President, it was learned last night.

All employes of emergency units, who are not excluded by law, will be affected. The agencies are Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Public Works Administration, National Recovery Administration, Tennessee Valley Corporation, Federal Surplus Relief Corporation and Farm Credit Administration.

Action Faces Delay.

The executive order will not be signed until salary classifications in emergency units have been completed by the Budget Bureau, it was understood.

The adjustments are being made to bring emergency employes on a par with workers doing identical work under civil service.

In many instances, it was pointed out, the new classifications will result in wage increases to emergency agency employes. In other instances there will be reductions.

Experts Scan Lists.

Classifications are being directed by William H. McReynolds, former head of the Personnel Classification Board, assisted by Paul N. Peck, former executive officer of the board.

Three other classification experts were borrowed from the Civil Service Commission. They are Miss Mary Mathias, Robert S. Hare and Edwin R. Bellinger.

The classification group is not studying the reorganization of the National Recovery Administration while rating the positions in it, Administrator Hugh S. Johnson said yesterday. Some attention is being given to ultimate reorganization, he said. Meanwhile, no large-scale reductions in the NRA forces has been made, and none will be made until the full scope of the compliance work is developed.

Appearing before Recorder J. Semple on a nonsupport charge, her husband said: "When I married my wife three years ago she weighed 105 pounds, now she weighs 180 pounds. Do you call that nonsupport?"

Couch Debt To Dillon Co. Is Disclosed

Sharp verbal exchanges between Howard C. Hopson, long-missing vice president of Associated Gas & Electric Co., and Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, marked yesterday's session of the Senate Banking Committee investigation.

Pecora won the argument when Hopson and his attorney, H. H. Corbin, agreed they would return Hopson's records to New York for examination in the Associated Gas & Electric Co. offices.

Tax Evasion in Evidence.

Other developments in a day marking the windup of two weeks' hearings in Dillon, Read & Co.'s activities were:

Disclosure that Harvey C. Couch, now a director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, but formerly active in investment banking business, owed Dillon, Read & Co. $150,000 of an original $300,000 loan as of December, 1931. No evidence was introduced to show the balance has been paid.

Evidence that James V. Forrestall, a Dillon, Read & Co. partner, legally avoided payment of income tax on $364,000 in securities profits by setting up a Canadian corporation, The Beekman Co., Ltd. Pecora contended the tax may yet have to be paid. Bernhard Knollenberg, the New York tax attorney who advised Forrestall, said he was prepared to argue the matter in the highest court.

Testimony of Robert O. Hayward, Dillon, Read & Co. partner, that the New York banking house and associates profited $953,700 from a $23,000,000 loan to Bolivia, more than $5,000,000 of which went to Armstrong-Vickers, Ltd., of London, for ammunition. He said there were $254,000 in gross profits from a $6,000,000 loan to Montievideo. Both issues are in default.

Hopson is Last Witness.

Testimony by Leonard Kennedy, New York engineer, that Dillon owned 45 per cent interest in his engineering firm when it received a Rio de Janeiro contract under a Dillon, Read & Co. loan. He said Dillon had no interest in another Kennedy company that received a Bolivian railroad contract.

Statement by Dillon that removal of officers' liability for mis-

New U. S. Policy Seen by Daniels

Envoy Says "Big Brother" Attitude Abandoned.

Mexico City, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels told a meeting of United States and Mexican business men tonight that the days when the United States felt like a "big brother" toward Central and South American nations had ended with the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

The Ambassador, addressing a banquet of the American Chamber of Commerce, declared that this big brotherly attitude had been the cause of the United States' imposing its will on "the little fellows." Now, however, he said the attitude was that of a "neighbor and a friend."

Strikers Riot Against NRA

New York Police Arrest 53 in Dispersing 3,000 Demonstrators.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Mounted policemen today broke up a demonstration of more than 3,000 striking workmen in front of city NRA headquarters, arresting 43 men and 10 women.

The clash was started during a parade of members of the Cleaners, Dyers and Pressers Union, a left wing organization, to the NRA offices in a midtown hotel. Boot and shoe workers and members of a men's custom tailors' organization joined the group.

Protests against NRA mediation in a threatened strike of 25,000 workers in neighborhood shops were shouted by some of the marchers.

33 Irish Republicans Seized in Round-Up

Belfast, Ireland, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Police in armored cars rounded up 33 leaders in the Irish Republican army in a surprise move today. Most were routed out of bed.

The 33 probably will be deported southward to the Irish Free State, together with 13 others recently arrested in Dungannon County.

Arrest May Stop Flow Of Dope to Twin Cities

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Federal agents said tonight they believed they had shut off the main source of narcotics to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., with the arrest of Harry Lowe, described by them as a former convict with a record of 32 arrests and 16 convictions.

Banks Eager To Share New Federal Bonds

R.F.C. Takes $50,000,000 of Preferred Stock in Chicago Firm.

Several important steps were taken yesterday in the administration's program of credit expansion, release of frozen bank deposits and Treasury financing.

President Roosevelt conferred with Budget Director Douglas, Chairman Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Henry Bruere, who is to head the proposed $1,500,000,000 new Federal banking corporation, and Joseph Broderick, New York State superintendent of banks, on plans to aid nonmember banks to become eligible for Federal deposit guarantee on January 1.

Chairman Jones announced the R. F. C. had agreed to subscribe for $50,000,000 of preferred stock in the Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co., of Chicago, fifth largest bank in the country, which thus led the way for smaller banks to follow its example in partnership with the Government.

Confidence Increased.

Treasury confidence in its ability to float its big, new conversion issue, whereby $1,875,000,000 of Fourth Liberty 4¼s will be retired, increased overnight as bankers indicated eagerness to subscribe.

Reserve Bank governors, after their quarterly meeting, left a recommendation for week to week continuance, as conditions dictate, of open market purchases, to support the Government bond market, and the reserve board reported $35,000,000 additional purchases of Treasury notes and certificates during the week ended October 11.

The governors discussed release of bank deposits and monetary policy but, despite contrary rumor, made no recommendations. Excess reserves now exceed $800,000,000, but the view prevailed that having undertaken support of the Government bond market, it can not be relaxed now.

Triumph for R. F. C.

Inducing the Chicago bank, of which James R. Leavell is president, to accept the offer of new capital is considered an important triumph at the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, since it sets an example for smaller institutions which hesitate to ask for the capital lest it be misconstrued as a sign of weakness.

"The Continental is the fifth largest bank in the country," said Chairman Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. "It is the first of the very large banks to join the Reconstruction Finance Corporation preferred stock program. The fact that it is taking advantage of the opportunity to strengthen its capital position through the sale of preferred stock to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is an indication that the larger banks, as well as the smaller ones, see the desirability of Government partnership."

The Chicago bank thus increased its capitalization from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000. Stockholders will be asked to reduce their common stock accordingly from $75,000,000 to $25,000,000 and the $50,000,000 difference will be credited to surplus, undivided profits and reserves. The bank has deposits of $650,000,000.

Deposits Plan Delayed.

Questions of policy are still delaying the President's announcement of the plan to free 50 per cent of frozen deposits in banks closed since January 1. There is heavy pressure to move the January 1 date back. Also policy on nonmember banks which may be found ineligible for Federal guarantee is undecided. Mr. Broderick talked with the President on this point.

Adolph C. Miller, a member of the reserve board, also was a White House visitor, giving rise to renewed rumors that he will succeed to the governorship if Gov. Black insists upon returning to his Atlanta bank.

Circumstantial reports persist that a White House announcement is imminent on monetary policy, but from the most authoritative sources come flat denials that definite developments are immediately in prospect.

Girl Here to Visit Sister Vanishes

Police Search Starts After 2-Day Disappearance.

Police search has been started for Sophie Synal, 16, of New Hartford, N. Y., who has been missing since she reached Washington two days ago.

She went to the former home of her sister, Mrs. Edward J. Thomas, at 1826 Bay street southeast. Her sister had moved to 820 Twentieth street northwest.

Neighbors told Mrs. Thomas of her sister's visit. Neither her relatives in New York or her sister has since heard from her.

Baltimore Bandit Auto Stolen Here

Theft Gives Police Clew in $7,000 Holdup.

The automobile used in a $7,000 holdup in Baltimore yesterday was stolen in Washington Thursday, giving rise to the belief that Washington bandits staged the robbery.

Lincense plates found on the automobile, owned by William Nalle, 3020 Tilden street northwest, had been stolen from the motor car of George Sumner, Sycamore Island, Md.

Text of President's Talk

Declares U. S. Does Not Seek Territorial Expansion in Address to Women's Conference; Urges Need of Improving Education.

The text of President Roosevelt's speech last night at the Women's Conference on Current Problems follows:

I am glad to have the opportunity of greeting those who are attending the third annual Women's Conference on Current Problems.

I note that the subject of this conference is "This Crisis in History," and this leads me to suggest that the short space of 10 minutes will scarcely allow me to do more than congratulate you on your courage in seeking fully to discuss "This Crisis in History" in the space of two days.

May I, however, touch very briefly on two matters which are much in my mind—two problems which can be helped by public interest and public discussion?

Calls Nation Peaceful.

One of them relates to the peace of the world. The danger to world peace certainly does not come from the United States of America. As a Nation, we are overwhelmingly engaging in war. As a Nation we are seeking no additional territory at the expense of our neighbors.

The United States does not seek to annex Canada or any part thereof, to annex Mexico or any part thereof, or to annex Cuba or any part thereof. It is this attitude of the overwhelming majority of our people toward their neighbors—this complete lack of a National desire for territorial expansion which makes the rest of the world begin to understand that the United States is opposed to war.

I will go one step further in saying that the very great majority of the inhabitants of the world feel the same as we do about territorial expansion or getting rich or powerful at the expense of their neighbors.

Assails Imperialism.

It is only in the case of such people in the world as still have imperialistic desires for expansion and domination in their minds, or in their hearts, that threats to world peace lie. And, finally, it seems clear to me that it is only through constant education and the stressing of the ideals of peace that those who still seek imperialism can be brought in line with the majority.

The other thought that I want to express to you is even more definitely along the line of education. It is true, unfortunately, that the economic depression has left its serious mark not only on the science and practice of education, but also on the very lives of many hundreds of thousands of children who are destined to become our future citizens.

Every one of us has sought to reduce the cost of Government. Every one of us believes that the cost of Government, especially of local government, can be reduced still further by good business methods and the elimination of the wrong kind of politics.

Pleads for Education.

Nevertheless, with good business management and doing away with extravagance and frills and the unnecessary elements of our educational practices, we must at the same time have the definite objective in every State and in every school district of restoring the useful functions of education at least to their predepression level.

We have today, for example, a large surplus of so-called qualified teachers—men and women who, even if we had full prosperity, would and probably should be unable to find work in the field of education.

Even today we are turning out too many new teachers each year. That is just as much an economic waste as building steel rail plants far beyond the capacity of railroads to use steel rails. It goes without saying that we should have enough teachers and not a large excess supply.

Better Teaching Urged.

It goes without saying that the quality of our teaching in almost every State of which I have knowledge can be definitely and distinctly raised. The main point is that we need to make infinitely better the average education which the average child now receives, and that, through this education, we will instill into the coming generation a realization of the part that the coming generation must play in working out what you have called "this crisis in history."

This crisis can be met but not in a day or a year and education is a vital factor in the meeting of it.

I am told that tonight I speak not only to the conference on current problems, but to colleges and universities throughout the country, many federations of women's clubs, almost 2,000 organizations interested in education, public and private schools and State educational associations, numbering among their members many of the educational leaders of America.

I mention this because, in closing, I want to enlist your support in the fight we are making on the depression. When this fight is won, your problems will be solved. You can help your government—Federal, State and local—and we in Government want your help.

for expansion and domination in their minds or in their hearts that threats to world peace lie."

His appeal for a better grade of teaching went not only to the New York conference, but to colleges throughout the country, federations of women's clubs and nearly 2,000 organizations interested in education.

He said the wanted to enlist the support of all these interests "in the fight we are making on the depression."

"When this fight is won," he asserted, "your problems will be solved. You can help your Government—Federal, State and local—and we in the Government want your help."

In reducing the cost of local government, he said, "we must at the same time have the definite objective in every State and in every school district of restoring the useful functions of education at least to their predepression level."

Surplus of Teachers.

"We have today, for example," he added, "a large surplus of so-called qualified teachers—men and women who even if we had full prosperity would and probably should be unable to find work in the field of education.

"Even today we are turning out too many new teachers each year. That is just as much an economic waste as building steel rail plants far beyond the capacity of railroads to use steel rails.

"The main point is that we need to make infinitely better the average education which the average child now receives, and that, through this education, we will instill into the coming generation a realization of the part that the coming generation must play in working out what you have called 'this crisis in history'.

"The crisis can be met, but not in a day or a year, and education is a vital factor in the meeting of it."

Hitler Regime Concentrates On Job Problem

German Leader Realizes Nazi Rule Depends on Employment.

(This account, the third of a series describing political and economic developments in various world capitals, tells of Germany's attempts to reduce unemployment.)

Berlin, Oct. 13 (AP).—With obvious satisfaction German newspapers reprinted today the statement of international labor offices in Geneva that Germany leads the world in reducing unemployment.

Simultaneously figures were published to show the number of idle in the Reich declined from 6,047,000 February 28 to 3,850,000 September 30.

Concentrates Efforts.

Chancellor Hitler believes his regime will stand or fall on the solution of the unemployment problem, at least insofar as Nazi membership is concerned, and is concentrating every effort on increasing jobs.

For years Herr Hitler's brownshirted National Socialist followers, of whom probably 80 per cent were recruited from the ranks of the workless, have been promised jobs with the Nazi accession to power.

The word went out after the Nazi "revolution" that the brown army must be given work at any cost.

That the unemployment problem has not yet been solved, despite the optimistic figures, was indicated by the Cologne Gazette, which, on the basis of monthly reports of chambers of commerce and trade and industry, found that while many branches of industry—such as agriculture and plants making automobiles and tools—were doing well, others like chemical, textile, leather and furniture factories were still unsatisfactory.

Expenses Increasing.

The Vossische eitung, furthermore, drew attention to what it called the danger of increased taxpayers' burdens by an automatic increase in expenditures arising from the creation of new departments.

In connection with the unemployment figures it is to be remembered that thousands have been transferred from groups supported by government funds and put in labor camps.

There they still draw the equivalent of a dole, but they are no longer counted as unemployed.

Hundreds of thousands were given work on government projects.

Regime Consolidated.

It can be said, meanwhile, the Hitler regime is now so consolidated and its grip on the nation so complete that such political problems as arise are within the Nazi movement itself and not with the opposition.

In this connection Vice Chancellor von Papen's recent speech in Frankfurt is considered significant in that it indicated Chancellor Hitler does not intend to follow a radical, socialistic course, but will, rather, seek to stimulate private initiative.

Havana University Reopening Planned

Rioting Over, Cuba Takes Up Routine Affairs.

Havana, Oct. 13 (AP).—Political negotiations gained slight attention from high government officials tonight as they speeded plans for reopening Havana University and dealt with routine governmental matters.

Officials were studying a plan to modify the antiscrip law now in force at sugar mills in order to permit some of them to reopen.

There were no reports of disorders from interior points and Ambassador Sumner Welles again called off the daily press conference because of lack of news.

Evidence Aids Torgler Fight

Reichstag Fire Suspect Happy, Testimony Favors Him.

Berlin, Oct. 13 (AP).—Ernst Torgler smiled happily tonight as he was led back to jail because he considered today's testimony in the trial of himself and four others for burning the Reichstag Building definitely in his favor.

The erstwhile floor leader of the Communist section of Parliament dropped his usually tense look when a Reichstag inspector described him as an industrious man, who worked late.

Therefore, the watchman said, Torgler's presence in the building shortly before 9 p. m. on the February night when the blaze broke out was not surprising.

Another inspector testified that Torgler, when he did leave, was not in undue haste.

Universe Like Bursting Shell, Scientist Holds

Birmingham, England, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—A new theory of expansion of the universe was advanced today by Sir James Jeans, research associate at Mount Wilson Observatory and former mathematics professor in Princeton University.

"The different fragments," he said, "are like the fragments of a bursting shell—to all appearances, they are receding from one another."

cans. Like protests came from Spanish, British, and Dutch embassies.

Mr. Dodd's plain-spoken manner at the conclusion of the interview left the impression he had forcefully told the representative of the German government how urgently America wants to know what has been done to punish the German attackers.

Dodd's frank public addresses hitherto have led members of the American colony to believe that he couples with a genuine appreciation for Germany's contributions to civilization an unflinching firmness in protecting American interests.

Further Conferences.

At the American Embassy it was learned the ambassador will have further conferences with Baron von Neurath until the situation is cleared up.

From a reliable German source it was learned that the German ministry of the interior was preparing information asked by Secretary Hull.

This, it was said, will include evidence that several assailants of Americans have been sent to concentration camps.

Chancellor Hitler also was reported to be pressing the huge apparatus of the propaganda ministry into service to acquaint every German in Germany, even those in the smallest hamlets, with orders that foreigners, irrespective of race or creed, must not be molested, and especially that foreigners can not be expected to raise their hands in the Nazi salute.

Thus Americans as well as Italians and British and members of other nationalities can wear their respective flags on their coat lapels.

Dodd Speech Comment.

Der Tag was the only newspaper here to comment today upon the speech, which United States Ambassador Dodd delivered yesterday before the American Chamber of Commerce.

Commenting on Dodd's statement, "it would be no sin if statesmen learned enough history to realize no system implying control of society by privileged seekers ever ended in any other way than a collapse," Der Tag said:

"Such, too, was the end of the parliamentary plutocratic Weimar system" (the German constitutional system).

It similarly interjects, "that is probably why we are denied colonies," after quoting from Dodd's speech, "statesmen today must * * * learn how to develop in a friendly spirit the resources of the undeveloped regions of the world."

Crisis at Geneva.

Geneva, Oct. 13 (AP).—Threat that Germany will withdraw from the Disarmament Conference and perhaps from the League of Nations if she is not permitted to negotiate freely tightened today the arms knot with which world statesmen are struggling.

The German spokesman who issued this warning maintained his government desires the same measure of initiative accorded other nations, and claims, not rearmament, but defensive weapons for equipping the standing army.

"We do not wish to rearm," he insisted. "We merely desire some weapons, the number to be negotiated.

"While other nations have been arming up to the strength authorized by treaty, it has even been hinted to us that we can not have the full number of arms of the type authorized by the Versailles Treaty."

German delegates kept in close touch by telephone with Berlin, where Chancellor Hitler and President von Hindenburg were reported talking over their stand on arms.

In the absence of Dr. Nadolny, Baron von Rheinbaden will represent Germany at tomorrow's meeting of the conference steering committee, when the British foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, will report on political negotiations.

Davis Studies Situation.

American Ambassador at Large Norman H. Davis played golf today with the Briton and between shots tried to think of new ways and means of keeping the conference going.

One indication of the probable nature of these plans lay in a report that Mr. Davis had tried to get other delegations to drop the defensive armament resolution.

He remained firm that a convention must not be forced on Germany, but coworkers believed with the French and British that there should be no German rearmament in a proposed four or five-year arms truce period.

Extract Stimulates Milk From Male

Tom Cat Can Nurse Kittens Scientists Are Told.

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 13 (AP).—Dr. Oliver Kamm, of Detroit, today described to a gathering of chemists a newly discovered gland extract, which he said would make it possible for any mother in normal health to nurse her babies at the breast.

"I don't want to say from this platform," he said, "that fathers will soon be nursing the babes but it is entirely within the realm of possibility.

"Providing the dormant pituitary gland of the male are in good health, from 24 to 48 hours after an injection a Tom cat can nurse kittens," he said.

Penologists Approve Desperado Isolation

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 13 (AP).—The Justice Department's move to segregate Federal prisoners of desperate character at Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay was approved generally today by the Nation's foremost penologists.

British Debt Parley Hunts Compromise

Approach Made to Basis for Settlement on Second Day.

(Associated Press.)

Anglo-American war debt negotiations yesterday reached the stage of a discussion of methods of solving the intricate problem.

In a two-hour session many avenues of approach were scrutinized, officials said, but "everything was very tentative." The British have not made a formal proposal for settlement.

A compromise is sought between popular British insistence that war debt payments stop and the view of the American Congress that the debts be collected in full.

Those who participated in the second formal meeting of conferees yesterday were Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, of the British treasury; Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador; T. K. Bewley, economic adviser of the British Embassy; Undersecretary Acheson of the Treasury; Frederick Livesey, assistant economic adviser to the State Department, and Daniel W. Bell, commissioner of accounts and deposits in the Treasury.

At the first meeting Leith-Ross outlined the British position with a contention that the loans in which the debts originated were non-commercial and necessary to the conduct of the war, and that widely altered economic conditions, unforseen when the debt was founded, have operated to make continued payments impossible.

The next meeting will be on Tuesday. Meanwhile, Acheson will go over the situation with the President.

Survey Will Seek Fair Tax on Liquor

should the eighteenth amendment be repealed.

Statistics also were gathered on the amount of legal medicinal stock on hand, on the import figures before prohibition, and on the source of most of the imported wines and liquors before prohibition, together with estimates on revenues the Government might expect.

It was pointed out the anticipated revenue for the first year is only slightly in excess of the $230,000,000 in emergency taxes to be automatically canceled when repeal becomes effective. The national industrial recovery act provides that taxes on gasoline dividends and corporate capitalization will become void on repeal.

Would Prevent Bootlegging.

It is for this reason that Treasury officials will insist upon as high a rate of taxation on liquor as possible, short of playing into the hands of bootleggers and moonshiners.

Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, it was understood, will recommend a rate of not less than $4.50 a gallon, preferably one of the war-time high of $6.40.

Until Congress enacts new legislation, probably not before the middle of February, the tax of $1.10 a gallon prescribed by the revenue act of 1926 will be in effect.

Part of the dilemma facing the authors of the new tax law will be the need for caution in not cutting down consumption by too high taxation. Proponents of the high figure cite tax returns in Great Britain.

Despite a decided drop in consumption of spirits in the British Isles during recent years, a steady revenue figure has been maintained by increased rates. The experts interested in increased American revenue claim that the American drinker will not be deterred by the fact that he pays the Government 10 cents on every drink of whisky.

Equalizing Wine Tax.

An equalization tax on wines will be urged to prevent drinkers taking to wine instead of more spirituous drinks because it is cheaper. It is explained that beer does not have this relationship to hard liquor. A high hard liquor tax does not increase beer consumption as it does wine.

Under the present law, 3.2 per cent wine bears the same tax that 3.2 beer does—$5 a barrel, or 16.1 cents a gallon. The wine tax on the books before the eighteenth amendment, which will automatically go into effect until Congress can deal with repeal taxation, is 4 cents a gallon on wines under 14 per cent. Until this situation is adjusted, the 3.2 wine will pay a higher tax than wine with much higher alcoholic content.

Control Group Named.

A committee to cooperate with District officials in drafting a District liquor control bill was appointed yesterday by Claude W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade.

The committee members are Joseph A. Burkart, chairman; Paul Lesh and George W. Offutt, attorneys, and Lawrence E. Williams and Edgar Morris, business men.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, requested a study by the Board of Trade so the public may be represented in framing liquor legislation.

Blues Songs Ring Along Lenox Avenue, Because It's Pork Chop Time in Harlem

Frying Cracklings Sizzle in Tenement Kitchens as Winter Nears.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—They are singing blues songs upon Lenox avenue, frying cracklings in the tenement kitchen and "joreeing" from the roof tops, for it's pork chop time in Harlem.

There is an affinity between a New York Negro and pork chops. He may never have seen cotton and may think a levee is a tax, but he has never been estranged completely from the victuals of Dixie.

Many of them speak with a careful accent and prefer opera to shout songs, but they still go to little cafes where the coffee is black and the cups are thick and order collard greens cooked with sidemeat and cornpone made of water-ground meal.

Only Place for Chitterlings.

Harlem is perhaps the only place in town where they advertise chitterlings and hot biscuits, turnip salad and yellow yams and pork chops fried until the fat curls up.

The stores up there often are crowded with Southern folk buying coarse meal from Negro merchants, who have it shipped straight from Georgia. And they usually linger long out of Dixie and yearns for are the merchant himself is not long outof Dixie and yearns for news of the cotton fields and pea patches.

First Cool Snap Brings Out "Hot Cat" Signs, Recalling Dixie.

Harlem to go pork chop in a big way. The cafes feature chops and the markets make them "special"—a bit of bone, a heap of lean and a strip of fat.

Hot Cat Signs Out.

The wanderer inquired of a young Negro:

"Tell me, is the catfish channel cat, mud cat or salt-water cat?"—there's a lot of difference.

"How would I know," snapped the Negro boy, "I wasn't there when they caught it."

But up from a corner came an older Negro, shuffling like a roustabout on a cotton steamer.

"Hit's channel cat, cap'n," said he, "dey ship hit heah from Memphis. Now tell me, please, suh"—there was a yearning in his voice—"how's things around N'aw'lans?"

Federal Trade Officials May "Police" NRA

(Associated Press.)

Visions of the Federal Trade Commission becoming the "police force" of NRA have been stimulated here by President Roosevelt's fight to oust William E. Humphrey, Old Guard Republican, from membership.

Previsously, the commission's importance had been eclipsed by instruments of the "new deal" as they sped the recovery program. For a time it was threatened with being abolished.

The President's statement that Humphrey and he did not see eye-to-eye in many things, and the measure he took to remove him indicates some big role must be ahead for the commission.

It is agreed that a lot of policing will have to be done under the Blue Eagle.

Gen. Hugh Johnson has said he didn't expect to have any "policemen" in his own organization if he could avoid it.

The industrial recovery act which set up the NRA provides that "upon the request of the President, the Federal Trade Commission shall make such investigations as may be necessary to enable the President to carry out the provisions of this act."

The commission is considered particularly well equipped for the work of code supervision.

Ever since its creation in 1914 the commission has been engaged in carrying out its primary duty of preventing unfair competition.

Fair competition is likewise a major objective of the NRA. The act establishing the commission, however, makes no provision, as does the industrial recovery law, for improvement of labor conditions or increased consumption by the boosting of purchasing power. Consequently, the commission never has assumed jurisdiction in labor problems

For that reason, some observers believe investigation of labor disputes is more likely to be handled by a special labor board.

automobile strikes. Leaders of the workers and the motor industry have been asked to attend.

Striking furniture workers at Mattoon, Ill., agreed to return to work with nonunion workers after company officials called off plans to close the plant.

Tear Gas Used.

West Virginia State police again used tear gas to move 3,000 strikers who booed workers at the Weirton Steel Co.'s Weirton plant.

A strike of 2,200 silk and rayon workers in Pawtucket, R. I., was given union approval. It closed 11 plants.

Leaders of several thousand tool and diemakers in Detroit voted to urge a mass meeting tonight to try to persuade automobile factory employes to join their three-week-old strike for 25 per cent wage increases and a 40-hour week.

At Chester, Pa., 600 to 700 men returned to the Ford Motor Co.'s plant, where several thousand have been striking for two weeks.

Bombs Set Off.

At Ridgway, Pa., a tipple of the Northwestern Mining & Exchange Co. was destroyed by fire, believed incendiary, with $30,000 loss. Trouble with coal cutters over a new wage scale occurred at the mine Wednesday.

Near Scranton, Pa., two bombs were exploded in the anthracite miners' strike. Near Birmingham, Ala., strikes at two mines were settled, but trouble developed at two others, leaving 1,000 still on strike over code interpretation and union recognition.

At San Francisco the strike of 5,000 sardine fishermen was regarded as settled and the Government moved to help end the strike of 12,000 southern California cotton field workers, in which three already have been slain.

10 Miners Arrested.

An aftermath of last week's outbreak of bombing and violence in the warfare between rival coal miners' unions came from Harrisburg, Ill., where 10 miners were arrested on charges of attempt to murder.

In Sullivan, Ind., where several bombs were exploded two days ago and where three National Guard companies are maintaining order, 25 secret indictments, charging participation in recent clashes between nonunion and union miners, were reported returned.

Court Awards $100,000 Claim Against Ford

Verdict Involved Sale of Old Lincoln Motor Car Company.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13 (AP).—A verdict for $100,000 was today awarded against Henry Ford, who tried to collect $6,800 from the Sweeten Automobile Co., of this city, due on a promissory note.

The Sweeten company, in receivership, admitted its indebtedness to the old Lincoln Motor Co., purchased by Ford, but countered with a suit for $168,000, which it contended it lost in acting as distributor of Lincoln cars.

The Sweeten company sued Ford on the ground that when the Detroit manufacturer took over the Lincoln company, he orally declared he would meet all the claims of creditors and stockholders of the Lincoln company.

Henry Ford and his son, Edsel, in depositions read at the trial, said they made no such promises. Edsel said:

"We bought the property at an open-and-shut sale, with no stipulations and clear of all promises to pay stockholders and creditors."

The case was bitterly fought, one of the principal witnesses being Wilfrid C. Leland, sr., an executive of the old Lincoln Motor Co. He testified Ford promised to pay the creditors and stockholders of the Lincoln company when he bought it for $8,000,000, more than ten years ago.

150 Attend St. Louis Rites for Slain Gangster.

St. Louis, Oct. 13 (AP).—Gus Winkler, reputed No. 1 Chicago gangster, was buried here today while 150 curious spectators from his old 'home town" looked on.

The man credited by Chicago police with inheriting the major portion of Al Capone's authority when the latter went to a Federal penitentiary for tax evasion apparently was buried without his diamond-studded jewelry.

His body, torn by 72 buckshot wounds which caused his death, lay in a silver-plated bronze casket. The gangster was shot down in Chicago Monday by two men who escaped.

Filipino Mission To U. S. Planned

Manila, P. I., Oct. 13 (AP).—Possibility that Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, and Senator Sergio Osmena, minority leader, would compose a new independence mission to Washington, D. C., was advanced today.

Quezon apparently welcomed the idea, which was presented during a senatorial debate by Osmena. Caucuses will consider the proposal tomorrow. The new mission would seek modifications in the independence act to overcome Quezon's objection to present proposed restrictions.

Dictator Move Collapses; Unemployed Just Don't March in Rain.

The District loves its parades, but two of them flopped—mightily—yesterday. As a result, President Roosevelt remains merely President, and District relief officials are happy.

The two marches scheduled for Washington yesterday evaporated en route. The remnants of a "Khaki Shirt" movement on the Capital were somewhere on their way home, while 2,000 relief paraders supposed to file through the streets didn't even show up.

Police believe the relief paraders were too busy thinking about rain checks. Details of policemen waited patiently at two starting points for them to appear, but barely a handful came. The march, arranged by the Washington Unemployed Council, was supposed to send 2,000 persons to District relief headquarters with demands for "more relief and the right to live."

Rain danced through the streets and police pronounced the parade washed out. Leaders promised a march Monday.

Meanwhile, convinced that somebody in the deal had been gyped, the colonels, admirals, generals and major-domos of the American Kahki Shirts rattled homeward in their cars and trucks. The move of 250,000 of their members to make President Roosevelt dictator had fizzled, the 44 who actually reached the District line admitted.

Police interest in the affair revived after the original 44 were turned peacefully, and puzzled, back to where they came from. A report was received that 200 more of the Khaki host were encamped near Laurel, awaiting daylight to enter the city.

"Like to buy a basket, boss?" their leader asked the bluecoats.

The law retired, leaving the task of dealing with Khaki Shirts to Philadelphia police, who were looking for Arthur J. Smith, grand commander.

Hopson in Verbal Tilts With Pecora takes of subordinates under the securities act, would improve the securities market and thereby stimulate industry.

Hopson, the last witness, couldn't remember whether he was president of Utility Accountants and Tax Consultants, although he admitted he organized the company. He estimated the number of corporations in the Associated Gas & Electric group at around 300.

The clash between Hopson and Pecora was the second interchange of the day. When Clarence Dillon concluded testimony on his banking firm's activities, Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, said he did not want to participate in a mere "exchange of flowers" between the committee and Dillon, Read & Co. partners.

Couzens, Dillon Disagree.

Couzens and Dillon had disagreed on whether the company deliberately concealed facts as to Brazil's default in a $25,000,000 bond issue.

The committee questioned Forrestal about the organization of corporations through which he "minimized" tax payments. Paul M. Striefffer, a Dillon, Read & Co. employe, said he suggested this means of legal tax avoidance.

Forrestal said he transferred 20,000 out of 37,000 shares of United States & Foreign Securities stock he had purchased, to Beekman Co., Ltd., without any consideration. Later he sold 16,788 shares for $896,000 in pool operations. Most of the stock originally was acquired for less than $1 a share. He paid $6,000 income tax, when $95,000 would have been required had he made the profit as an individual.

War Debt Ignored In French Budget

Third Default Indicated on U. S. Payment.

Paris, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—The French government gave further indication today of not resuming war debt payments to the United States as it prepared to submit its 1934 budget to the finance committee of the Chamber of Deputies.

Estimates for the year set a new all-time high in budgets for the French republic—but made no provision for payment of war debt installments either to the United States or Great Britain.

The move was not unexpected. France has defaulted war debt payments twice in the last year.

Mystery

Pinchot's Letter on Davis Is Still Secret.

The mystery of the letter sent to the Senate by Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania, marked "not to be opened until" after the trial of Senator James J. Davis on lottery charges, deepened yesterday when Vice President Garner said he did not even know of the missive's existence.

From his Texas home the Vice President sent word that the "mystery letter," if found in the safe of the secretary of the Senate, would be opened and made public only if insructions to that effect were received from Gov. Pinchot. The latter had asked that it remain unopened until after the trial for fear of prejudicing the Davis jury.

Senator Davis said yesterday he did not know what the letter contained.

Beltsville Farm Study Station Given Million

Enlargement Expected to Make Center Among Best in World.

A grant of $1,145,000 for new buildings, laboratories and land at the Beltsville Agricultural Experiment Station, allotted yesterday by the Public Works Administration, will create one of the world's leading centers in that field, agricultural officials said yesterday.

The enlarged station will serve as a focal point for the Nation's $6,000,000,000 animal husbandry and poultry industries.

Plans call for construction of a $425,000 main laboratory and a group of smaller laboratories. The Bethesda Experimental Station for animal diseases will be moved to Beltsville.

Several hundred men will be given work for six months, starting almost immediately.

German Boycott Voted by Labor

the interest of National recovery. Babcock echoed his statements and asserted the average Government employe now earns less than $3.40 a day.

And as a result the convention ordered its lobby to fight for the employes, for restoration of pre-economy era pay scales, 30-year optional retirement, cancellation of the cost of living as a basis for determining wages, removal of prohibitions on promotions, restoration of leaves, elimination of "harmful" speed-up practices, reduction of night work, establishment of a civil service court of appeals, employe representation on personnel boards, a 30-hour week, improvement of conditions for substitute postal employes and village letter carriers, restoration of 1923 pay classification for field naval workers, transfer of naval repairs from enlisted personnel to civilian employes and enfranchisement for District of Columbia residents.

Cooperation in the battle for restoration of wages was promised by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, the Democratic chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Meanwhile, the federation convention pledged itself to seek a Federal licensing law for business which would become effective upon expiration of the NRA and demanded greater speed for the public works program.

Green Demands Action.

The boycott, affecting 4,000,000 A. F. of L. members plus their families—a total of 20,000,000—was voted after the convention heard President William Green and Miss Selma M. Borchardt, of 1741 Park road northwest, a Roosevelt High School teacher, describe what were characterized as atrocities under the Hitler regime.

The delegates swamped protests of Andrew Furuseth, chief of the seamen's union, who feared a boycott might bring repercussions in the United States. His was the only opposition vote.

It was believed at first that the boycott had been extended to include Italy, China and Russia because its resolutions committee warned it would "seem unwise" to boycott one nation without including others which, it is said, denied organization rights to workers or persecuted people because of "race, religious belief or political affiliations," but President Green denied this.

"The boycott declared by this convention is to apply only to goods from Germany and German services," he said. "It in no way is intended to affect any other country."

Purpose of Resolutions.

Resolutions pledged the A. F. of L. to:

Protest against expenditure of public works funds on projects in "isolated" areas.

Protest to administration officials "against the propogandism and application of any policy tending to reduce wages below a decent standard of living and prolonging hours to an extent which would effect no considerable absorbtion of the unemployed."

Demand Congressional investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. because of alleged "exploitation" of employes.

Establish a labor chair in some university.

Give aid to international and local unions in localities where "city officials and politicians are attempting to manipulate labor for personal profit."

Conduct a publicity campaign against "racketeers" conducting labor organization campaigns for profit and power.

Ask a Congressional investigation of strike-breaking agencies.

Action Delayed On Two Pivotal NRA Issues

Official View of Retail Price Fixing, Coal Operators Wait.

Two of the most serious problems now confronting the recovery program were scheduled for action yesterday, but decisions were postponed as recovery officials moved cautiously to avoid dangerous complications.

The National Labor Board delayed until next week its decision on what action to take against nine Kentucky coal mine operators who ignored summonses to explain charges that they had discharged miners for joining the United Mine Workers.

Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson planned to announce the attitude which the administration would take toward retail price-fixing, but reversed his plans because of delay in receiving "an important communication," and decided to wait a while before acting on the general retail code, the retail grocery code, and the retail drug code and other agreements involving stop loss provisions.

The "communication" which Johnson failed to receive, it was indicated, was White House approval of a compromise price-fixing plan, reported to have been agreed upon by him, Secretary Wallace and Administrator Peek.

President Roosevelt was represented as feeling that substantial progress was being made in efforts to adjust differences between Pennsylvania coal miners and the steel corporations which own "captive mines."

The National Labor Board assumed jurisdiction over the Weirton, W. Va., steel strike; a tool makers' strike in automobile plants around Detroit; a bricklayers' and a shoe workers' strike in New York; an upholstery dispute affecting New York and Chicago workers; the Westinghouse strike in Springfield, Mass.; and clothing strikes in St. Louis. Public hearings were ordered next week.

New Rules Given In Securities Sales

Advertisements Must List Capital Stock Figures.

Regulations authorizing the use of abbreviated financial statements in newspaper and periodical advertisements of new security issues were promulgated yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission.

Detailed figures on the capital structure of the issuing firm are required in all cases, and where the corporation is less than two years old the names of all promoters must appear.

Although the complete prospectus filed under the securities act need not be published, all advertisements must carry the address from which the detailed statement may be obtained. A copy of the prospectus must be given every purchaser before he buys an advertised security.

"Baa, to You," Says Mayor; "Fine Is $10!"

Daniel Presides as Judge in "Bronx Cheer" Case, Convicts Two.

Falls Church's "baa-a baa-a" business netted two $10 fines last night.

Falls Church has been troubled with noises recently. The most vexing to authority have been noises somewhat related to the famed Bronx cheer, delivered with a slightly different emphasis to produce a distinctly sheep-like note.

Townsmen Moyer Copeland and Joseph Birch last night were fined $10 for disorderly conduct and contempt of court in connection with some recent lusty "baa-a-s."

Mayor Is Judge.

Fifteen persons, mostly newspaper reporters, crowded the small jail-court room for the hearing, while 800 milled around outside. Fairfax County's entire police force guarded proceedings.

Despite charges by William C. Gloth, attorney for Copeland and Birch, that Mayor Daniel had no right to sit as judge in a case for which he signed warrants, Mayor-Judge Daniel refused to withdraw. His verdict of $10 fine was met with announcement of appeal.

"Cheers" in Evidence.

Copeland and Birch were arrested at the trial of Garland Brown, charged with displaying a derisive tire cover on his auto. The tire cover incident followed the conviction of Boddy Copeland, brother of Moyer Copeland, on a charge of giving the "Falls Church cheer" to Mayor Daniel and Sergeant Shumate. The "cheers" were much in evidence during the trial last night—from the outside. The verdict produced more.

Watson Answers Firemen's Charges

Defends Rule Restricting Petitions to Congress.

The rule prohibiting city firemen from petitioning Congress except through the chief engineer or the Commissioners was passed only to acquaint the Commissioners with the petitions, it was asserted yesterday by Chief Engineer George S. Watson.

This was a reply to charges by Paul E. Jamieson, counsel of the City Firefighters Association, that firemen were being denied their constitutional right of petition.

Replying to the complaint by firemen that the chief engineer would not liberalize the rule requiring firemen to live in the District, Watson said that the act had been passed by Congress to insure quick action in emergency. He said when firemen are summoned to their stations it is usually in stormy weather when transportation is difficult. Only when a physician certifies that the health of the fireman makes it necessary for him to live outside the District will a permit be granted, Watson said.

Daladier Acts To Save Franc As Emergency

Premier to Demand Fast Decision by Parliament on Gold Measure.

Paris, Oct. 13 (AP).—Premier Edouard Daladier will declare a state of emergency when Parliament reconvenes Tuesday it was learned officially tonight in an effort to push through a gold franc program in whirlwind fashion.

The Premier is hopeful a bill to balance the budget will be voted and fears of inflation allayed by the end of the week.

M. Daladier, who says he will stake the existence of his cabinet on the proposal, must marshal a two-thirds majority on the emergency project.

Three measures will be introduced Tuesday: A budget bill on which special procedure will be sought; a public works program and one aimed against the high cost of living.

Premier Daladier counts on strong anti-inflationist sentiment throughout France to aid him in trimming the budget deficit and protecting the franc.

Salary reductions, increases in taxes, and heavy penalties for tax evaders are said to be included in the economy measure. Tax experts estimate that the state loses a billion francs yearly through fraud.

Mrs. Long Pleads For Missing Boy

Newspaper Carrier, 12, Gone Since Tuesday.

"Francis—— please come home."

Tearful and almost prostrate with grief, the mother of Francis Long, missing Washington Post paper boy, last night requested The Post to print this message to her son.

Francis, who will be 13 years old Tuesday, left his home, 1313 Tenth street northwest, the night of October 10 to make collections along his paper route. He never returned. Because he was attacked and robbed last year by several colored youths, police have concentrated their searching efforts along his subscribers' route. The boy's father, J. J. Long, a paperhanger, has sought the boy day and night.

"Francis has always been a model boy," Mrs. Long said last night. "I can't imagine what the trouble might be. He has never done anything like this before. But please tell him to come home—we will forgive anything if we can only have him back."

Two colored men in a stolen car, trapped yesterday in an alley between Fourth, Fifth, K and L streets northwest by Detective Sergts. Hugh Robey and Jake Wolff, attempted to ram their automobile against a police car which blocked the alley.

Wolff fired at the men as they fled, and arrested one of them, Charles Simms, colored, 25 years old, having no address. The other escaped.

The car was equipped with a smoke screen. The detectives went to the place on a tip that a load of liquor was to be delivered at that point.

Gives Up 3-Week Fight With Doctors to Hide Identity.

A battle of wits between a 16-year-old Washington girl and psychiatrists of St. Joseph's Hospital, in Paterson, N. J., ended yesterday when the girl admitted she was Dorothy Juanita Kirby, of 1700 A street southeast.

For three weeks, since she was picked up by a policeman, physicians attempted to identify the girl. A visitor, who came to see Dorothy on the chance she was a missing sister, was responsible for the identification. When she saw Dorothy was not her sister, the woman burst into tears. The runaway youngster also started to cry, and then confessed her identity.

Dorothy disappeared from home September 19. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Kirby, have been hunting her ever since. The girl disliked school, her mother said, and wanted to go to work. She left with little money, and apparently made her way directly to Paterson.

She told physicians she was determined not to reveal her name. Arrangements are being made to return Dorothy to Washington. She is a student at Eastern High School.

Jurist Lays Crime Rule To Public

Pampering of Prisoners, Tolerance Assailed at Conference.

Pampering of prisoners and tolerance of the American people toward crime were assailed by Judge Marcus A. Kavanaugh, of Chicago, addressing the National Anticrime Conference at the Shoreham Hotel last night.

Flogging was upheld by the Illinois jurist as "the greatest deterrent" to crime, and was advocated by the conference's committee on punishment, paroles and pardons for prisoners convicted on more serious charges.

"The main ally of the criminal in the United States," said Judge Kavanaugh, "is tolerance of the American people. We feel ourselves no part of the administration of law. The verdict of 'not guilty' satisfies the American subconscious mind.

"The prisons of the country need a checking up. Wardens, who themselves are faddists, or who have come under the control of faddists, should be removed."

Raps Criminal Lawyer.

Naming the criminal lawyer as "the most active ally of the bad man or woman," Judge Kavanaugh declared:

"The verdicts of juries under the guidance of the criminal lawyer are often a shame to the public. Our juries almost always shy at inflicting the death penalty. This can not but be out of consideration for the public, which is in sympathy with the offender. Infliction of all penalties is measured by desire to help the prisoner. The American people must be taught to forget this.

"I believe that in States and countries where flogging is permitted this punishment of physical pain is the greatest deterrent."

Judge Kavanaugh declared "fences" do more to promote and uphold larceny than the thieves themselves, and that the best minds of the police department should be concentrated upon these offenders.

Must Arouse Public.

"The soft-hearted judge who influences a verdict of 'not guilty,' the incompetent State's attorney, the supine magistrate, must be removed by an outraged and aroused public," the speaker declared. "The first and greatest effort of this conference will be to awaken the American conscience to that effect."

Supporting Judge Kavanaugh's advocacy of greater severity, Mrs. Charles H. Fisher, of New York, president general of the National Society of Colonial Descendants, urged capital punishment as a deterrent to kidnaping and other forms of racketeering.

At the morning session Senator Copeland, chairman of the Senate committee investigating racketeering, warned "repeal of prohibition will turn loose on society a multitude of underworld characters, now trafficking in liquor, who are likely to resort to kidnaping and other forms of crime to continue their ways of easy living."

The real remedy in fighting crime goes to "the very foundation of society, and courage on the part of the citizen is essential," he said. "In the last analysis what we accomplish will be the result of an aroused public opinion."

Representative Sumners, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, also declared discharge of "the obvious duty of the private citizen" necessary to end "the shameful reign of crime in this country." He warned that unless the people "set their faces against crime the Federal Government will be stepping in, and States and communities and private citizens will be stepping out."

Assailing "farcical" trials of wealthy criminals, Representative Sumners asserted that in many instances the trial judge, instead of having the power necessary to control the proceedings, sat in a reserved seat, a mere witness to a battle between lawyers.

Frank Gould Leases Gambling Concession

Paris, Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Frank Jay Gould, American gambling magnate, today leased his famed $5,000,000 Baccarat Casing at Nice to an operating syndicate for an annual rental of 2,500,000 francs (about $150,000).

1934 Auto Plates To Be Ready Jan. 1

Predicted Delay at Prison Will Not Materialize.

Washington autoists will not get the periods of grace for 1933 license tags they expected, after all.

J. E. C. Bischoff, business manager of District penal institutions, said yesterday that 150,000 plates for 1934 will be available January 1. Several weeks ago, it was said the new tags would be several weeks late due to a delay in a steel shipment.

The District's order is for 180,000 plates, but a large share of them are not distributed until late in the year.

Legion's Cash Bonus Demand Unchanged, Says Commander

Fight for War Disabled Only Temporary Shift in Campaign.

Action of the American Legion at the national convention in Portland two years ago advocating cash payment of the bonus "still stands," National Commander Edward Hayes said yesterday.

"If the Legion is to be criticized for not reiterating its views on the bonus at the Chicago convention, it will have to take it on the chin," he declared.

Hayes said the Legion's first job was to restore benefits to veterans disabled in service to their status before passage of the economy act by Congress last spring. Legislation to this end will be presented to Congress by the Legion in January, he said.

Bonus advocates at the Chicago convention were dissuaded from bringing in a minority report favoring payment by the argument that the Legion's first duty is to the men disabled in service, Hayes stated.

"When the disabled man is out of danger, then is the time to think of something else," he said.

The Legion's legislative aims, as outlined by Hayes, include reinstatement of the "presumptive" provisions of the compensation law; compensation for widows and orphans, based on need, and added National defense.

"The Legion does not like it that our Army is seventeenth; our Navy, third," Hayes said.

Hiker Robs Driver, Flees in Trailing Car

Maryland State police last night had no clews to identify a polite hitch-hiker and his assistant, who yesterday robbed William Carpenter, of Kansas City, Mo.

Carpenter picked up a young man at Hyattsville. Near Laurel, the youth drew a revolver and forced Carpenter to give him his purse, containing $55. The thief refused Carpenter's plea to return $5, so as not to "leave him broke." He then escaped in a car that had been following.

Royalist Split Seen in Vienna

Dissenters Deny Party's Right to Speak for Otto.

Vienna, Oct. 13 (AP).—Austria's only monarchist party outlined its aims in a press conference today.

Rival monarchists immediately challenged its right to speak for Archduke Otto, son of former Empress Zita and claimant to the throne, or for the monarchist movement.

In the subsequent debate foreign correspondents got the distinct impression that Austria's monarchists are not yet agreed as to what they want, what Otto wants, or what Austria wants.

The principal demands laid down by the party are revocation of the Hapsburg exile law and representation in the cabinet.

It is uncertain whether a Socialist party conference, to which Socialists of several countries are expected, will be permitted.

Socialists have urged a general strike and revolution as an answer to Heimwehr Fascism.

Brussels, Oct. 13 (AP).—Archduke Otto, claimant to the Austrian throne, has no intention of going to Austria, an intimate, Count Von Degenfeld, said today. He added that rumors of Otto's engagement to Princess Maria, of Italy, were "entirely unfounded."

Oil Code Labor Board Formed

Will Advise on Questions Affecting Workers in Industry.

A labor policy board in the oil administration was established yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Federal oil administrator, to aid in deciding basic questions of principle and interpretation affecting labor. Several such issues are pending.

"The new board will make a general study of the labor situation in the industry," Ickes said, "to assure labor a full realization of the advantages provided by the code.

"It will determine the most practicable method of investigation in dealing with complaints of violations of labor provisions to insure successful enforcement of the code.

"The new board will advise the petroleum administrative board, already organized within the Interior Department by the Secretary to advise him and to carry out functions placed in the department by the petroleum code."

Board members will include three representatives of the petroleum industry, three representatives of labor and a chairman to be named by Ickes.

Kelly Boasts He Will Break From Prison

Kidnaper Cries Defiance; Shut Behind Doors of Leavenworth.

Leavenworth, Kan., Oct. 13 (AP). George (Machine Gun) Kelly, sentenced to life imprisonment as a kidnaper, arrived by train under armed guard from Oklahoma City late tonight and was hurried inside the walls of the Federal penitentiary.

"I'm going to break out as soon as I get to Leavenworth," he had shouted defiantly during a short stop in Kansas City.

Started With Sneer.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 13 (AP).—With a sneer on his lips, George (Machine Gun) Kelly was started for Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary today aboard a locked, barred and bullet-proof railway coach.

Eight Federal agents, each carrying a machine gun, rode with the desperado, one of six persons sentenced to life imprisonment for the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil millionaire. The prison coach was attached to a regular passenger train.

Harold Nathan, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said arrival at Leavenworth was scheduled for midnight.

"I won't be in this spot long," Kelly scoffed just before he was taken aboard the coach.

His auburn-haired wife, Kathryn, convicted with him and also sentenced to life imprisonment, remained behind in the county jail. W. C. Geers, United States marshal, said he had not received orders to remove her to a penitentiary.

To Be Sent to Island.

Justice Department officials at Washington said Kelly would be confined at Leavenworth only temporarily, and that he would be transferred to the Government's new prison for dangerous convicts—Alcatraz Island, off San Francisco—as soon as the island prison is ready for use.

Two of the other convicted Urschel kidnapers, Harvey Bailey and Albert Bates, were taken by airplane to Leavenworth several days ago to begin their life sentences. The others sentenced to life, R. G. (Boss) Shannon and his wife, remained in jail here with Kathryn Kelly. Shannon has not made $10,000 bond for 60 days of liberty in which to wind up his business affairs.

"Be a good boy," Kathryn told her husband and kissed him through the bars of her cell. "I will," Kelly responded glumly.

Handcuffs and leg irons were kept on him as he took his seat in the railway coach.

Period Fixed In Applying Tobacco Pact

(Associated Press.)

The retroactive feature of the flue-cured tobacco marketing agreement will apply only to that part of the crop sold between September 25 and March 31, leaving the Farm Administration to work out a plan of benefit payments to growers who sold before the effective date.

J. C. Lanier, an administration tobacco specialist, said the minimum average of 17 cents a pound domestic buyers have contracted to pay will be computed on the entire amount sold between September 25 and March 31, the end of the season.

The average since September 25 has been considerably below 17 cents a pound, but if the average between now and March 31 is sufficiently high to bring the general average for the whole period up to 17 cents, no assessments will be made against the signatory companies.

If payments between now and March 31 should make the general average 17 cents, individual farmers who have sold all their tobacco at lower prices will receive no benefits. Lanier said, however, he doubted if in North Carolina there was any considerable number of growers who had sold all their crop.

In the case of farmers who have sold their crop, especially those in Georgia, where the markets closed some time ago, and in the South Carolina border belt, the administration is trying to work out a benefit payment plan.

Under the plan now under consideration, farmers who have sold their crop will be given additional benefits when they sign the acreage reduction contract. The money for acreage payments is to come from the 4.2 cents a pound processing tax on tobacco domestically manufactured.

Tax Official Dodged Taxes, U. S. Charges

William H. Malone Indicted by Chicago Grand Jury; Is Now in Europe.

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—William H. Malone, former chairman of the State tax commission, was accused of falsifying his income tax returns and dodging payment of $59,580 today in an indictment by the Federal grand jury.

Malone paid a tax of $5.23 in 1929. The Government said he should have paid $58,478.55. In 1930 he paid nothing, claiming a loss. The Government asserted he should have paid $1,101.58.

"Other income" was the terse description of what investigators found in an inquiry started last July, when a special grand jury was impaneled. What that income consisted of was not disclosed, but in hearings the prosecutors tried to bring from witnesses that Malone had shared fees paid to attorneys appearing before him in tax reduction hearings for large corporations.

Malone was a member of the State tax board for 10 years, the last five as chairman. Now he is traveling in Europe. District Attorney Dwight H. Green intimated he would ask the State department to cancel his passport. Eighteen months ago Malone was a loser in the Republican primary for Governor of Illinois.

Malone's income from "other sources" in 1929 and 1930, the Government charged, was $269,958 and $79,150.

Shoe Code Applied; Job Gain Promised

1929 Employment Level Expected in Industry.

The code of competition for the boot and shoe manufacturing industry, approved October 3 by President Roosevelt, became effective yesterday with a promise of employment for many additional workers, according to the Associated Press.

The code, providing for a 40-hour week and minimum wages varying from $14 to $15 weekly for men and $12 to $13 weekly for women, depending on the size of the community, is expected by NRA officials to provide work ultimately for about 226,000—the level of employment in the industry in 1929.

At present fewer than 200,000 are employed in this industry.

Chihuahua Governor Says Line May Be Bought.

Presidio, Tex., Oct. 13 (AP).—Gov. Rodrigo Quevedo of the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, said in a luncheon address today the Mexican government was negotiating for the Mexico-Orient Railroad, which connects with the Santa Fe here.

Should negotiations be completed, gaps of the line west of Chihuahua City would be closed to Topolobampo, on the west coast of Mexico, and the distance between Kansas City and the Pacific tidewater would be shortened about 400 miles.

Mr. Rockefeller as a Killjoy

Many Liberal Americans Scoff At His Plan to Stifle Repeal

By William Harlan Hale.

My first reaction to the State liquor-control plan as proposed by John D. Rockefeller, jr., early this week was not to read it. It seemed to me a man who had been one of the most saintly leaders of the prohibition movement ought not now to presume to tell us any more about liquor, after his ideal had been so ruthlessly discredited.

But somehow the Rockefeller plan has been keeping a daily place in the press, side by side with advertisements of fine whiskies, Napoleon brandy (1848) and Piesporter Goldtropfchen (1921). Its continuance there suggests that its influence is rising, and that is an alarming thought.

In Washington these days it is very hard to find people who will discourse on liquor control from any but a legalistic or a budgetary point of view. It took a whole trip to New York to find out whether liberal American souls, future consumers of our more potable liquids, were going to stand for a control system such as this.

The Rockefeller plan proposes a State monopoly of liquor somewhat resembling the Canadian system. Its most notable provision is that liquors of heavier alcoholic content nowhere are to be sold by the glass, or consumed in public. Elaborate safeguards are erected to protect all those drier cities and States which may have voted for repeal by only a small margin. Mr. Rockefeller's apparent anguish over the fate of these communities becomes a bit humorous, in view of the fact no States or cities have yet voted for repeal "by a small margin."

Indeed, the whole tone of the Rockefeller plan is negative. It begrudges the citizen every drop that passes his aching lips. It wants, above all, to keep the demand for alcohol "unstimulated." It wants to keep us to a "minimum demand."

Persons of liberal view, on perusing this document, assert that (paradoxically enough) it has the quality of a hangover. It is an attempt, they think, to bring the mortmain of prohibition forces down upon a country that finally has fought free of the shackles of a dry decade. Its solitary goal, rather than being efficient control of a liberated liquor industry, is protection of a scabrous minority.

Mr. Rockefeller fails to realize that we did not vote for a faint-hearted program of light wines and beer; we voted for a total return of liquor, from the gentle suds of Pilsen to the high explosives of Glasgow. Finally breaking away from its fears, its Puritanisms and its hypocrisies, the American Nation dared to utter one great Rabelaisian shout for the return of the bottle.

Let us look the fact in the face. The American has declared, through constitutional channels, that he wants to do his drinking in public and without restraint; he is sick both of the gurgling bathtub of gin and the whistling round of gangsters' bullets.

He does not want to hear any talk to the effect it is perfectly respectable for him to consume 12 per cent wine "on the premises," but it is criminal for him to consume a glass of 13 per cent highball elsewhere than in his own home, preferably with the shutters down.

The problem, then, rather than to attempt the shackling of public drinking, is to make that drinking legally protected and decent. We have got to take the moral sting out of alcohol. So long as it remains there, through the help of Mr. Rockefeller and his forces, there will be subterranean evasion and indecency.

In New York, of course, they were furious. Holding a golden glass of hoary Armagnac up to the light, they speculated on how much more golden it would look when held up to the sun, from some happy cafe table along the avenues. And now both were to be banished from public view: the fragrant liquor as well as the cafe table! And who was going to take it all away? Why, Mr. Rockefeller, the great benefactor of mankind!

They looked forward to visions of the Canadian system, with its complex and chaotic restrictions, which force a poor fellow who thirsts for the taste of fermented grain to go furtively around a corner, get a bottle from a frowning official through a wire railing, and slip home with the goods like a criminal. They looked forward to the English system, with its two principles, (1), that liquor is a great source of revenue, and should be drunk since the country needs more revenue; and (2), that liquor is inherently evil, and should be made available only at certain short hours in the day.

They considered the hypocrisy of the English method, and the tawdriness of the Canadian. And then they thought of the wide-open French system, whose very freedom and decency places an obligation of sobriety on the nation. They thought of the German system, which makes the whole country, at any hour, one vast oasis from the forces of asceticism; of the Italian system, which keeps a population sipping happily almost all day in its trattorias.

The gentlemen ordered another round, and with glass on high vowed: "You shall not press down upon the couch of American leisure a wet blanket; you shall not crucify mankind upon another case of mineral water!"

Muscle Shoals Work Ordered

Roosevelt Authorizes Dam No. 3 Project to Cost $6,000,000 in Year.

(United Press.)

The Tennessee Valley Authority was directed yesterday by President Roosevelt to begin construction of dam No. 3 at Muscle Shoals.

An integral part of the Government's plan to supply reasonably priced power to residents of Southeastern States, the project will require expenditure of about $6,000,000 during the next year. An Alabama delegation headed by Senator Black requested $22,000,000.

Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the Valley Authority, said last night that present plans contemplate using dam No. 3 primarily for power generation instead of for improvement of navigation.

The President has suggested that sufficient funds be allotted to carry on a year's work on the Muscle Shoals project instead of allocating at once the whole cost Elephants!

14 in Circus Believed Ill From Poisoning.

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 13 (AP).—Apparently poisoned, 14 of the herd of 50 elephants here with the Barnum & Bailey Circus became ill yesterday several hours after they had been fed, and the show went on without them.

Five of the elephants were too ill to be moved to Winston-Salem and were left here with caretakers, the beasts trumpeting with pain. Circus officials said they were unable to explain what they regarded as poisoning. Food and water given to them revealed no trace of poison.

None of the elephants was on exhibition last night and roustabouts strained at moving huge poles and boxes when the show broke up, work usually done by the elephants.

$31,000,000 Paid for Pigs

Total U. S. Expenditure to Farmers in Hog Program Told.

Approximately $31,000,000 was paid to farmers who sold pigs and sows in the National hog program, Department of Agriculture officials announced yesterday.

Approximately 6,200,000 pigs and 200,000 hogs were slaughtered during the five-week campaign. Cost of processing, storing and miscellaneous expenses was $4,000,000 additional, it was stated.

Around 100,000,000 pounds of pork were obtained. This was turned over to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration for distribution to the needy. About 17,790,000 pounds were ordered shipped direct to relief agencies in 40 States.

About 80 per cent of the pigs were too small for processing into edible pork and were turned into inedible grease and fertilizer tankage.

Construction Cost Problems.

The restoration of normal conditions in the building industry is a matter of great concern to all sections of the country and to all classes of people, because a sustained business recovery sufficient to absorb the many millions of idle workers still unable to find employment will not be possible unless the heavy industries are able to expand their operations. The construction industry creates a demand for iron, steel, cement, lumber and numerous other heavy products; consequently a revival of building operations means more work for large numbers of people both within and without the industry.

The decline in building activity which followed upon the great expansion of the four or five years immediately preceding 1929 brought the volume of new building below normal before the end of that year. The extremely low level of operations which has prevailed since that time is believed by those familiar with conditions in the field to indicate that, taking the country as a whole, a shortage of buildings of various types exists at present. Consequently, they conclude that a revival of the construction industry is to be expected as soon as certain extraneous obstacles to resumption of activity are removed.

Financing difficulties are of major importance; but their nature and causes are well understood, and have been discussed at length in connection with the general problem of attracting long time investment funds into industry. There is, however, another impediment to the resumption of building operations about which comparatively little has been said—that is, the high level of wages prevailing within the construction industries.

According to the Engineering News Record, the average hourly rate of pay for skilled construction labor in 20 leading cities was $1.02 in August. Although this figure is below the level of 1930, when the hourly rate amounted to $1.39, it is far out of line with rates paid skilled labor in other trades and industries. Skilled and semi-skilled male factory workers averaged 56 cents per hour in August. The rate for unskilled factory labor was 40.9 cents per hour, whereas the rates for common labor engaged on construction projects averaged over 45 cents per hour.

Needless to say, these high hourly rates have not benefited construction workers as a class, since the percentage of unemployment in the building trades is far greater than in most lines of industry.

In view of the drastic reductions in general prices and in production costs, it is evident that the construction industry is doubly handicapped. It is suffering not only from lack of investment capital to finance needed expansion but also from failure or inability to adjust costs to the requirements of the present time.

Fire Prevention.

As an unforeseen prelude to Fire Prevention Week, which is now being observed, 27 men were burned to death in Griffith Park, Los Angeles, by flames that were carelessly started. This was a major tragedy, but it represents only a small fraction of the loss in life and property that each year must be attributed to negligence in the use of fire.

Current estimates place the annual loss from fire at $400,000,000. This sum almost equals the value of the entire wheat crop in the United States this year. Most of the fires contributing to this colossal damage might have been avoided by cleaning up trash in basements, by careful inspection of heating equipment, by care in the use of matches, candles, etc. Some fires are caused by lightning and others by seemingly unavoidable accidents, but the vast majority might be prevented by the exercise of reasonable caution.

Each year at this season the danger arising from carelessness with fire is brought to public attention. Yet the staggering waste from this cause is not substantially diminished. Only when the public becomes sufficiently aware of this danger to be constantly on guard against it and to employ known preventive measures in homes, offices, garages, etc., as well as in fields and forests, will there be a chance of substantially reducing the annual fire toll.

Aerial Express Service.

Notwithstanding the growing use of commercial aviation for the delivery of express parcels, the United States is still far behind European countries in the utilization of this time-saving service. Last year the express matter carried by all American air lines amounted to 1,324,000 pounds, or about 3,600 pounds a day. In comparison German planes carried over 11,000 pounds a day, those of France in excess of 6,000 pounds, and those of Italy 5,000 pounds. The combined total of the British empire, 3,500 pounds, alone fell below that of the United States.

The utility of this rapid delivery service was demonstrated recently when a shipment of clock parts was dispatched from Germany and reached Mexico City in eight days. Two packages, weighing a total of 18 pounds, left Stuttgart by plane to connect with the Europa, sailing from Bremen. In the plane that was catapulted from the deck of the Europa the parcels reached Newark 12 hours before the liner docked. Another plane carried them to the border, whence they proceeded to the Mexican capital by train.

Air express poundage in the United States is reported to be growing rapidly this year, and the character of shipments, once limited to small emergency parcels, is constantly expanding. Late estimates indicate that the total of American air expressage this year may reach 2,000,000 pounds.

Gold Hoarding in London.

According to the London Financial News, gold hoarders are making heavy purchases of the metal in the London open market at the present time, although this method of acquisition is more costly than direct withdrawals from central banks in countries still on the gold standard. The hoarders are willing to pay an additional premium because they fear that if gold payments were to be suspended by continental gold standard countries, they would be called upon to surrender their hoards after the American fashion.

So far the Bank of England has made no effort to restrain those who indulge in hoarding. The provision of the currency and bank notes act of 1928 which empowers the bank to demand the return of gold holdings in excess of £10,000 was intended primarily to prevent the large banks from attempting to build up independent gold reserves. Hence, foreigners conclude that London is the safest place in which to carry on their operations.

The English "let alone" policy apparently is based upon the theory that under existing conditions, drastic measures to outlaw hoarding might lead to a sharp drop in the price of gold, which the authorities fear would have a deflationary effect. The Financial News points out that when confidence is revived and hoarded gold is needed to serve as a basis for credit expansion under a restored gold standard, it will be returned voluntarily to the central banks. In the meantime, most of the leading central banks, including the Bank of England, are in possession of abnormally heavy gold reserves judged by the standards of former years, and there appears to be no need to strengthen these holdings by trying to force surrender of private hoards.

Curable Diseases.

Mysterious diseases that strike down victims of all ages and baffle all the resources of science attract a great deal of attention. Maladies that are less spectacular, which involve no element of mystery, often are allowed to run their course, taking a dreadful toll of life quite needlessly.

Cancer is an outstanding example of the malignant diseases that are widely feared because the medical profession has not discovered their cause. Reports to the second annual cancer symposium of the American College of Surgeons show that 24,448 cases of cancer have been cured, with no recurrence for five years or more. In its early stages cancer is often curable, and even in the later stages competent physicians frequently are able to arrest the progress of the disease. Yet the cause of cancerous growths remains a dilemma to the most learned surgeons, and every new assault upon this mystery is followed by the press in response to public interest.

The virulence of cancer justifies all the attention that is given to this disease and explains the public fear of it. Some physicians estimate that 50,000 lives could be saved every year in the United States and Canada if all cancers were to be diagnosed and treated in their incipiency. Washington is fortunate in having a cancer clinic for this purpose.

Appendicitis seems to be given much less attention than cancer, yet Dr. Alton Ochsner, of Tulane University, told the College of Surgeons that among individuals less than 50 years old appendicitis causes four times as many deaths as cancer. There is no mystery about appendicitis. Its cause is well known and usually it can be prevented by proper diet and exercise. Removal of the appendix affords a complete cure. Doctors agree that 399 out of 400 appendicitis deaths could be avoided if the victims would consult competent physicians at the time of their first attack. Yet, according to Dr. Ochsner, the mortality rate from appendicitis is 50 per cent higher than it was 15 years ago and is still increasing.

The public is extremely negligent in utilizing the medical knowledge that has been made available. The discovery of remedies is only one step toward elimination of disease. Under present conditions public education in health matters appears to be of at least equal importance with medical research.

Music and the "Cop."

One of those inalienable rights of Americans which the Constitution failed to list is the right to criticize, confound, and razz the policeman. The very appearance of a tin badge from around the corner seems to be the signal for going "agin the government". So, growing in arithmetical proportion, the presence of a police squad, with that look of "meaning business" on its face, arouses the keenest ill-feeling and the most brilliant vocabulary of abuse.

The American cop, bull, dick, flatfoot, or mere constabulary, is of course accustomed to all this. But yesterday's newspaper carries a description of an attack upon him and his organization that surely has no precedent.

The fury, as raised by several citizens of New York, is against the Police Band. Imagine! All the sides of the police force had been denounced so effectively that the only thing remaining was their music! It might appear, at first thought, that what the citizens were objecting to was the quality of police music; that they were demanding a little more Beethoven, and a little less Sousa.

But no, the critique was not an esthetic one at all. The trouble is simply this. The New York Police Band, as well as the New York Fire Department Band, and even the New York Sanitation Department Band, have been accustomed to play at functions whose nature was not "public;" that is to say, beside its regular engagements in civic parades and other general celebrations of the electorate, it has brought its concord of sweet sound to private and personal functions also. It has played, we gather, at clambakes, baseball parks, and other places where both profits and politics were involved.

Worse than that, in thus carrying out its devotions to musical art, it has absented itself from regular duties for which it is being paid by the citizens. Worst of all, in making its private performances without charge, it is preventing the employment of a considerable number of professional musicians.

To the last charge one can, of course, offer no objection. But the other charges do seem severe, indeed. How often have policemen been ridiculed for their lack of veneer, of finesse, of culture! And now, when we discover that a small group of them actually are spreading the lofty cultural pleasures of music, they are attacked for that!

What does it matter whether these pleasures are granted chiefly at sporting events, Tammany outings, and other shenanigans? It's music, isn't it? And does it not sound far better to the ear than a police whistle?

From Miami former President Menocal expresses fear of civil war in Cuba. As distinguished from the uncivil variety?

New York's charity air pageant reports a deficit of $40,000. Too many spectators still consider the air free.

Far-Off Motor Vehicles.

By William Ullman.

It is all wrong, that story you have been hearing about motor vehicles being barred from Bermuda; of the island being the last stronghold of the horse. The fact is that Bermuda has 32 motor vehicles, and the reason why tourists ride around in buggies, or walk, is that all the vehicles happen to be trucks.

The truth about the Bermuda motor vehicle situation is one of the interesting oddities that are to be gleaned by glancing behind the cold figures that tell how many automobiles are running around over the face of Mother Earth.

There is Uganda, for example. This country, located in British East Africa, has taken up the motor vehicle in a considerable way, but not in the way that it has been done in the United States. Uganda does not look upon the automobile as a pleasure vehicle so much as a mechanical beast of burden. It has considerably more trucks than passenger cars.

The citizens of Gambia, separated by the width of the African continent from the Ugandans, have precisely the same philosophy about motor vehicles; namely, that trucks are the thing.

One can not look at the figures on motor vehicle registrations in the Faroe Islands without a furtive hope that no Faroe islander will buy a car until some neighbor junks one. As things stand now, the number of cars registered in the islands is so delightfully round that it seems a shame to break it. The registrations stand at an even 100.

The same might be recorded of Spitzbergen, famous as the place to which flyers with Arctic ambitions always are going. Spitzbergen holds the world's record in having the smallest number of cars registered, one. It happens to be a truck of American manufacture. This same truck, interestingly enough, has served the extremely valuable purpose of keeping Spitzbergen on the world automotive map for three consecutive years.

Next to Spitzbergen, the pedestrian's brightest opportunity is to be found in Antigua—if first the pedestrian can find Antigua. Antigua, one of the British West Indies Islands, has only 31 automobiles, 3 of them buses and 28 trucks.

Algerians, whose fondness for used—badly used sometimes—American automobiles has been a well-cultivated market, have managed to build themselves into a respectably large motoring nation in spite of their reputation for reckless driving. There are now 42,850 passenger automobiles in Algeria.

Taiwan, Formosa, has a unique position among the countries of the world with respect to its motor vehicles. The big majority of Taiwan's motor vehicles are neither passenger cars nor trucks, but buses. There are 1,220 buses in the island as compared with about 600 each of passenger cars and trucks.

A study of world automotive registration figures is distinctly flattering to Americans, not only because it reveals that this country owns some three-fourths of all motor vehicles, but because no single country in the world can boast of as many registered cars and trucks as the State of New York or California.

MORE TROUBLE TO COME.

Marconi was asked in New York the other day about wireless or radio echoes, according to the Topeka Capital. He admitted that he had picked up the word "no" after it had circled the world several times, but stated that with longer words it is not easily done. He assented to the notion that greatly increased power of sending apparatus may conceivably fill the air some day with messages that will continue to go around the globe and thus the air may even become clogged with "a jumble of talk that has outlived its usefulness, if it ever had any." If it ever gets so that there is not enough unused air left for private business and conversation, that will be another world problem.

THE LOEB CLASSICAL LIBRARY

James Loeb, who died recently, was a public-spirited business man of the highest intelligence and character. He was born in New York in 1867; was graduated from Harvard in 1888, and became a member of the famous banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., from which he retired in 1901, to devote himself to educational and philanthropic causes. He was a multitudinous blessing, and became a member of many learned societies. But the work for which he will be longest remembered was his founding, in 1912, of the Loeb Classical Library which will eventually include 25 centuries of Greek and Latin literature.

He was a member of the Golf Club in Munich, Germany, and I must have seen him playing there, for that is the only European golf club to which I belonged.

The Loeb Classical Library already includes a great many volumes, published in handy and attractive style. On the left page is the original Latin or Greek; on the right page the English version, newly translated for this edition by some distinguished British or American scholar. Now there must be hundreds of men and women who studied Latin in their youth and scores who studied Greek. Most of them are no longer able to read the original; but while reading the English it is a pleasure for them to glance at the Greek or Latin text, which will in many instances bring back their school days.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen.

My Dear Louise:

In answering my letter concerning the causes and dangers of swell-head, you ask what one should do when a former friend proves herself no longer worthy of respect and trust.

I suppose you mean that the erstwhile friend will think you guilty of swell-head if you avoid her, and you are wondering if such avoidance does in fact indicate that you are feeling unduly superior.

It is a problem that has puzzled many an older head than yours.

One way you look at it, discarding a friend who has gone wrong is equivalent to setting yourself up as a judge and saying: "I am holier than thou, and a person as fine as I am can't stoop to the level you occupy."

In that case the discarded one might answer with bitter truth: "My sin consisted in being found out. You are not perfect yourself, if the truth were told, and your pose of superiority simply means that your secret faults haven't yet been discovered by the public."

Well, my dear, a great heart can forgive much, and I would have you always err on the side of charity.

It is small and mean to drop a friend who is pure in heart because of one mistake or because of public opinion. None of us is pure enough and holy enough to look down on a fellow sinner who found one temptation too strong.

But you can't keep up an intimacy that has become unbearable merely in order to keep the other fellow from thinking you conceited. An opinion is no more important than the person who holds it, and it is foolish to sacrifice anything to hold the good opinion of one whose opinion no longer matters.

What is more, you are under no slightest obligation to a former friend who proved unworthy of your friendship.

A friendship is a contract. The terms of the contract are the personality and character of the contracting parties. You do not take a friend for better or for worse, but with the tacit understanding that he will remain as he is—that he will preserve the character that inspired your friendship.

Your admitted fondness for peaches doesn't obligate you to keep on liking them after they have spoiled. If you love a friend because she is fine and square, the contract is broken when she becomes a drunken crook. And it isn't high-hat to avoid one who can't be trusted to keep a contract.

Love, DAD.

World Trade Stability.
Kansas City Times.

The fact that while the money value of American exports declined 33 per cent in 1932, as compared to 1931, the United States continued to be the greatest exporting country in the world once more emphasizes the importance to this country of doing everything possible to promote a revival of international trade—and, in particular, of removing the new obstacle to such a revival that has come into existence since the period for which these latest figures were compiled. That obstacle, of course, is the fluctuating dollar that makes every transaction a gamble.

Speaking of Taxes.
Los Angeles Times.

We roar about taxes and damn the politicians. And there is plenty of material for just indignation.

But in our righteous wrath we should not forget that—

Taxes put a policeman at the corner to keep traffic moving and untangle snarls that occur. Taxes send officers on swift wings of radio after gangsters menacing our homes. Taxes imprison criminals who prey upon society and ravage innocence and virtue. Taxes are preventive as well as protective.

Taxes catch the Baileys and gunmen Kelleys. Taxes build educational institutions and man them with teachers. Taxes train our youngsters, 30-some millions of them annually, and make them useful citizens.

Relief for Home Owners.
Kansas City Times.

In the few weeks of its operation up to September 23, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation reports that it had stopped approximately 13,000 foreclosures and saved that number of homes throughout the country. The figure admittedly is not large, although it presumably has been materially increased in more recent weeks, and it represents a hopeful beginning. Evidence of the latter is that by September 23 nearly 52,000 home owners had been given assurance of loans.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Bargeron.

THERE is something really delightful about Gen. Johnson's speeches. They have a rhythm, a punch; they sparkle and reflect the poetry and adventure that are in the general's make-up so surely as the sun rises and sets. Next to Mr. Roosevelt, he is, in fact, the best speechmaker in this administration. With both of those gentlemen speechmaking is a gift, and there is a question as to which one really gets more pleasure out of making a speech.

It is only when one reads or studies the general's speeches that he is bewildered. Then the melody is gone and the man becomes a mystery.

* * * *

WHY does he, for example, keep insisting that his NRA is the instrument of recovery in this country and that if it fails we are sunk? It is true his agency is called the National Recovery Administration and sometimes the National Industrial Recovery Administration to distinguish it from agricultural recovery, about which there is a lot of grumbling that it is not recovering fast enough.

But most students of the subject seem to have come around to the conclusion that whatever the NRA may be, whatever good it has accomplished, whatever was its original purpose, it is not the instrument of recovery.

Indeed, this seems to be the administration's general attitude, all save that of the general. In so far as the administration itself is concerned it undoubtedly looked at one time upon the NRA as the recovery thing, threw all of its weight behind it and held it before the public. But for many weeks now the administration seems to have been of a changed belief and is bringing other agencies into play to bring about recovery—reopening of banks, stimulation of capital goods purchases and speeding up of the public work's program.

* * * *

IN a short while the NRA is expected to disappear entirely from the front page and be resolved into a mere administrative agency dealing with codes and wages and fair practices. It would have disappeared from the front page ere now had it not been for strikes and the trouble it is having.

As to its part in recovery—no one save the general now contends it is the main instrument—there has been disagreement and probably always will be so long as the thing is discussed. Unquestionably there has been some reemployment under its codes. On the other hand are those who believe there would have been more recovery by this time had it not been for the NRA and uncertainties it stirred up.

Be that as it may.

* * * *

WHAT everyone does seem agreed upon is the NRA has been an instrument of social reform. This is its admitted accomplishment, anyway. It has accomplished a social reform of the first order. Whether it would have been better to leave this reform for a more normal state of business is a question. But the reform is here—and that is that.

* * * *

As the instrument of recovery, though, the brain trust has gone seeking for more promising things. The NRA plays little part in its current thinking. Only with the general is it still foremost.

* * * *

AND because of this he renews in his every speech and solemn warning that the NRA must succeed, that we can't stand another slump. Must succeed, at what? It has accomplished the only thing it is capable of accomplishing.

What makes the general's warning so funny is that even as he delivers it he is figuratively urging over his shoulders that the public works and banking program be speeded up. Why he should be so concerned about these if his agency is the agency of recovery, the one which must succeed, is difficult to understand.

One gets the impression that what the general is trying to save is not so much the country as his NRA.

Just Folks.

Indifference.

He planted roses in the spring
And watched them come to blossoming.
Much as a maiden's lovely smile
Their beauty charmed him for a while.
But June went by and came the days
Of summer with the world ablaze
And to the casual bloom or two
Indifferent and aloof he grew.

The perfect blooms of June he'd known
And claimed their beauty for his own.
But tiring stem and thinning leaf
Tested his love and proved it brief.
Had he but walked the plot around
Weeds and wild shoots his eyes had found
And just a little thought and care
Had kept his roses thriving there.

Indifference and neglect remain
Great fountain heads of human pain.
'Tis well enough in days of spring
To claim the first fresh blossoming.
But hearts and roses both require
Devotion as they age and tire.
All that is joyous swiftly goes
To weeds when man indifferent grows.

Up in Front and Down In Back, Paris Decrees

The gods and goddesses who rule upon the Mount Olympus of Fashion—(Paris to you)—at last have made up their August minds about that all-important subject, decolletage. Their decree is, up to your chin in front, down to your waist in back.

Shoulders, with few exceptions, are covered, but the huge puff sleeves that were with us in the merry springtime have gone the way of the dandelions. Much newer and even more flattering are the wing-effects and fichu-like draperies of fur or glistening materials that adorn the season's most precipitous evening gowns.

Taste Is Added To Left-Overs In Meat Line

Flavor of Reheated Dishes Makes Thriftiness More Desired.

By Ruth Chambers.

Economy dictates that every bit of food purchased be well utilized these days, but there is reason besides thrift for using left-overs of meat. That is the taste, which is sometimes even improved when meat is reheated after its first cooking and which, fortunately, is extended to other foods with which the meat may be combined.

Hence the continued popularity of left-over meat dishes. The French, who appreciate so well the matter of flavor in food, have their own special ways of arranging delicious combinations. Here is a French meat loaf which is quite out of the ordinary. You'll notice that it forms a way of serving liver, so important in the diet.

French Meat Loaf.

For one pound cold minced beef allow 2 ounces of raw liver. Melt a tablespoon of butter in a saucepan and into this slice an onion. Let it cook gently for ten minutes, then remove the bits of onion with a fork. Put the liver, cut in fine pieces, into the pan and cook it slowly for five minutes, then add enough stock or water to cover. Season with half teaspoon mixed spices and add plenty of salt but no pepper.

Next stir in the minced beef which has been well mixed with a heaping tablespoon of flour. Put the pan over the flame and stir until the hash just boils. Add a little more liquid, if necessary, and cook gently until the hash is warmed through. This hash is to make the meat loaf.

Next, remove the top crust from a new loaf of bread. Scoop out the inside, leaving only a hollow shell. Fill with the hash and replace the top crust. Pour what gravy is left over the loaf until the crust is well soaked. Put into a buttered tin and bake in a quick oven until the crust begins to brown. Slice through the loaf and serve hot.

If desired, the crumbs from the loaf may be mixed with the hash, but this should be done at the time of warming the minced beef and liver.

Baked Lamb Hash.

Left-over portions of lamb sometimes are puzzling to the cook who doesn't wish anything to be wasted. Here is a way of making an appetizing dish from whatever may be left of the roast shoulder or leg of lamb:

Mix equal quantities of cold cooked chopped lamb and freshly cooked diced potatoes. Moisten with cream sauce. Season with salt, pepper, parsley and onion. Put this into a buttered baking dish. Moisten with cream or milk Cover with crumbs, dot with butter and bake in the oven until well browned. This will require about 20 minutes.

Lamb Souffle.

2 cups cold minced lamb
2 egg yolks
2 egg whites
1 tablespoon flour
1¾ cups of milk
1 tablespoon butter
Salt
Pepper.

Beat the egg yolks, add milk and flour, salt and pepper. Stir well and add the lamb. Cook until it is slightly thickened. Cool, then add the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake for 20 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.).

Ham and Noodles.

4 cups cooked broad noodles
1 cup ham, finely dieed
2 cups thin white sauce
½ cup grated cheese

Put a layer of noodles in a buttered baking dish, sprinkle with ham and cheese and cover with white sauce, which has been made by using 2 tablespoons of flour, 2 tablespoons of butter, salt and pepper and 2 cups of milk. Fill the dish in this way. Sprinkle the top liberally with grated cheese and dot with butter. Bake in a hot oven for about 20 minutes.

Six Eggs Enough For Fluffy Omelet

To make a fluffy omelet for an average family, use six eggs. Beat the yolks thoroughly and add six tablespoons of milk. If desired, the milk may be heated. Thus it cooks the yolks slightly when added and gives a smoother consistency.

Chopped fried ham or bacon, grated cheese or a cooked vegetable such as peas, mushrooms or asparagus may be added to the egg mixture before it is cooked. Or it may be spread over half the cooked omelet before it is folded and turned onto the platter.

A combination of chopped onion, green pepper, celery and parsely, delicately fried in butter, may be added to the omelet mixture before it is cooked. This gives a different and filling dish.

Helen Hubert Favors 3-4 Coat Ensembles

Paris, Oct. 13.—Helen Hubert (who used to be with one of the big houses and who has done marvelously since going in for herself about two years ago), favors ensembles with three-quarter coats, be they in cloth or fur. She likes side trimmings rather than front and back arrangements.

She trims her dresses with fur and has a very smart way of using black astrakhan and white ermine to get just the color and content contrast she is looking for. Shoulders and upper sleeve sections are very important here, more so for the coats than for the dresses. Helen's two new colors this season are a bright emerald green and a rich garnet red.

Heres an Attractive Autumn Combination

Fried green tomatoes, prepared in bacon fat or any other desirable grease, make a succulent dish for fall days. Above photo shows how tempting they appear when served with crisp bacon.

Green Tomatoes, Fried With Bacon, a Favorite Dish Now

Cream Sauce Method Also Delicious, While Mock Mince and Pickles Made of Same Fruit Are Fine Palate Tempters.

You can't catch a tomato in a mean mood. Even when it's green, it's full of ripe opportunities for good eating. As in the dish, for example, that's so popular 'round about, now, the country over—fried green tomatoes with rich cream sauce. (Page Gracie Allen!)

For frying green tomatoes it's a good thing to choose them large and smooth—say 8 of them. First wash them and cut off stem ends. Then cut in thick slices, and dip in a mixture of ½ cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper. Next, heat some bacon fat (or other fat) about ¼ in deep in heavy skillet. Fry tomatoes in this (not too fast) till both sides are brown. Then lay the tomatoes on a hot platter and sprinkle just lightly with sugar.

Don't Wash Pan.

To make the sauce, pour off any fat left in the skillet, but do not wash the pan. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in it, blend in 2 tablespoons flour, gradually add 1½ cups rich milk or thin cream. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Season with ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, and pour over tomatoes. Serve very hot.

For mock mincemeat, take a peck of green tomatoes, slice them, cover with boiling water and let stand 15 minutes. Drain and repeat. Then let tomatoes drain in a bag overnight. In the morning, measure the amount of water that has dripped out, and use the same amount for cooking—putting it into a kettle with the tomatoes and the following ingredients: 3 pounds seeded raisins, ½ pound citron, ½ pound suet (all put through chopper first), 5 pounds sugar, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, 1 teaspoon clove, 1½ tablespoons salt. Cook until thick (about 45 minutes). Just before mixture is done, add 1 cup cider vinegar. Turn into hot, sterilized jars and seal.

Green Tomato Pickle.

As for green tomato pickles, of course there are dozens of recipes. I gave a very good one in my recent bulletin on pickles. So here's another that's not only good, but very easy to make.

First mix the following vegetables with ¼ cup salt, 4 quarts green tomatoes (sliced), 4 large onions (chopped) and 3 green peppers (chopped). Let these drain in a bag overnight. In the morning put them into a kettle with the following: 2 cups sugar, ¼ cup celery seed, 6 cups mild vinegar, 1 tablespoon whole black pepper, 1 tablespoon allspice, ½ tablespoon whole cloves, ½ cup white mustard seed. Let come to a boil. Then boil 5 minutes. Put into sterilized jars and seal.

Send for More Recipes.

This is the sort of pickle that pork in any form cries out for. So it's especially appropriate to mention here my brand-new bulletin, "Preferred Ways to Cook Pork." It tells how to make barbecue pork roast, stuffed pork chops, crown roast with prunes, pickled pig's feet, head cheese, baked spare ribs and sauerkraut, scrapple and many other favorites. If you haven't had my bulletin, "15 Favorite Pickles and Relishes," you might like that also—now that pickling cucumbers and green tomatoes are so abundant. Boat Neckline Appears Again on Style Horizon

Our old friend, the boat neckline, is sailing across fashion's horizon again, this time a more seaworthy craft than formerly. A crisp cuff has been added, to give piquancy to the face above it, and accent the flattering line from shoulder to shoulder. Guaranteed to meet any requirement from noon to midnight, the boat neckline is delightful on a luncheon frock, appealing on a dinner dress, and sweetly naive on a formal gown.

Organdie is crisply becoming on a simple dark frock, taffeta or ubiquitous satin, effective at the dinner hour; and lame would be grand for evening. Astute designers, however, are using material of the gown for the cuff bateau when the model is a formal one.

Banana Dish Winner of $5 Weekly Prize

Mrs. Richard Potts, Frederick, Md., Gets Award for Unusual Recipe.

Bananas as an appetizing and attractive item of the diet are often neglected by the housewife in her search for healthful hints for the daily bill of fare for her household.

It is true that bananas, unless properly ripened, can not always be eaten with safety of digestion by all members of the household. But when selected properly and of the proper degree of ripeness, they are not to be ignored in food planning.

6 bananas
½ cup brown sugar
1 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon butter
Dash of cinnamon

Boys Lead Girls—in 'Flunking'

They're Just as Bright, Cleveland School Board Survey Shows, but They Don't Please Teacher Quite So Much.

Cleveland, Oct. 13 (AP). — More boys than girls, report the statisticians of the Cleveland Board of Education, invariably "flunk" school courses, but not because boys aren't as bright.

"Boys pester the teacher more, and she, consciously or unconsciously, takes it out on them in marking."

The latest survey of the board of education's bureau of child accounting bears out similar results obtained three years ago in showing that boys do not excel girls in a single subject, so far as the percentage who keep from "flunking" is concerned.

"Boys are as bright as girls," Connor maintains. "In fact, boys generally rate higher on tests than do girls. It just goes to show that passing marks in school depend upon pleasing teacher.

"The schools are set up in such a way that a premium is placed on conformity and girls conform better than boys."

In English, the survey discloses, the failures among the boys amount to 10 per cent and among the girls, 4.2 per cent. Similar casualties occur in German, mathematics, miscellaneous social sciences, art and shorthand. Even in physical training 3.42 per cent of the boys fail, while only 2.59 per cent of the girls miss promotion.

Chef Gives Startling Recipe

How many eggs and so forth are needed to make a cake 4 feet high? While diners at Ewart's Thirteenth street cafeteria were pondering this question yesterday, after viewing the handsome cake that had been made to celebrate the first anniversary of the establishment, the chef, R. Nicols, was chuckling in the kitchen. The chef had used the following recipe: One vinegar keg, sawed in two; one cheese box and one wooden mixing bowl. Then he used this recipe: Place one-half vinegar keg on a firm base; add cheese box, placing it in the exact center of the keg's top; turn wooden mixing bowl upside down and place on cheese box; cover the entire structure with delicious-looking white frosting and decorate with spun sugar fruit in bright colors; put birthday candle on top. To serve: Cut with a saw, taking care not to spill sawdust on the floor.

Greater Need of Girl Scouts Is Explained

Lone Male Convention Delegate Says Boys Can Get Along.

Milwaukee, Oct. 13 (AP).—There is a greater need for girl scouting than there is for boy scouting, in the expressed opinion of the only male delegate to the Girl Scout convention.

Twenty years in Boy Scout work and fifteen years in Girl Scout activities leads James E. Brooks, retired consulting engineer of Glen Ridge and Montclair, N. J., to believe he is qualified to judge.

"The Boy Scouts are a great organization," he said today, "but even without it boys are inclined to develop into good and active citizens. Girls are different. They are just begininng to enter fields heretofore strictly left to men, and they haven't the natural inclinations or abilities which thousands of years of experience has given to the other sex."

Senora Pepita de Lopez de la Rosa is attending the convention as a delegate from Puerto Rico. She told how the Girl Scouts there are trained in first aid, sewing and cooking to enable them to work with relief agencies when destructive hurricanes sweep the island.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Beware "A Course of Medicine."

A most pernicious habit is that of taking periodically what is called "a course of medicine." By this phrase is meant taking a large dose of calomel followed by an equally large dose (from the medicinal standpoint) of salts. Some vary this technique by taking three compound cathartic pills or a corresponding dose of some other drastic purge.

The reason for taking the course of medicine is usually a set of minor discomforts grouped under the term bilious. The immediate effect is several hours of discomfort, followed by a feeling of well being. The constipation habit and a line of minor ills and maladajustments follow in the wake of this habit and are consequences of it.

A far better plan is to meet the immediate need, if there be any, by a 24-hour fasting period, during which nothing is taken except fruit juice, a little sugar or candy, thin soup, water, a cup or two of coffee. An enema can be taken if necessary. If there is reason for taking a laxative it should be the mildest available.

Much more important than immediate treatment is changing one's daily routine so as to bring the amount eaten into relation to the amount of work done, and to change the diet to one that is simple and wholesome.

For 40 years prior to 1882 Orville Browning was a prominent citizen of Illinois. During this time he was a senator, Secretary of the Interior, and an attorney general. He kept a diary, and this has been published in two large volumes by the Illinois Historical Society. Mr. Browning was an able leader of American opinion as well as a great lawyer, but this diary establishes the fact that he was a poor custodian of his own health. Certainly not less often than once a month he took a course of medicine at night and for 24 hours thereafter he stayed at home in bed, away from work, and refused all business and social engagements because the medicine was working.

The discomfort that his often recurring "cures" cost him must have been great. Illness did not cost him much time from his work, but the courses of treatment did. His absenteeism from office and work because of the workings of the cure would cause a present-day employe to lose his job.

Nothing in the diary indicates that Mr. Browning needed to punish himself with cathartics as he did. But then, such was the custom in his day—a custom that now persists only to the extent that a fair proportion of the population takes "a round of medicine" occasionally.

The Browning diary in reference to his own experiences and those of his family and associates shows that attacks of diarrhea, probably due to spoiled food, were very frequent in that day. He makes many notations of being laid up for a day or two with "cholera morbus," with no reference to having taken medicine. He was an active lawyer on a large circuit and he ate many meals away from home. There was no refrigeration and no commercial canning in that day. People lived largely on supposedly fresh food, supplemented by the products of home canning. The evidence indicated that the food was often not fresh and not in good condition. Improved canning, refrigeration and better marketing methods have almost eliminated diarrhea in adults.

Cloth 'Collet' Exploited By Fashion Dictators

Paris, Oct. 13.—The word "Fantasy" covers a multitude of fashion sins, and when in doubt as to what to call any bit of trimming from a B. V. D. button to a million dollar aigrette, "Fantasy" usually pinch hits for saner description.

The official fashion records of Paris note in the pages of their most exploited magazine that this season is the cloth "collet" edged with fur or in Astrakhan ragondin, seal, and, above all, composed of several foxes, cross-cut and interlaced. Other "Fantasies" as noted by the French officials of mode are "a few muffs, some quite small balls of fur, others very large, and flat and draped in material or fur. Buttons, in long rows, are very flat in metal or wood or divers materials, often of loud colors, and always flecked with metal.

ESTABLISHING A REENTRY.

A really brilliant defensive player combines in his analysis keen card reading with an accurate estimate of his opponent's style of play. He is master of the double-cross, the triple-cross and so on ad infinitum. In the hand given below, Mr. John L. Liston, Boston, Mass., made a clever play which was based upon the knowledge that his opponent, a sound card player, would choose what appeared to be the best chance to make his contract, and thus fall into Mr. Liston's trap.

South, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♡	Dbl.
Pass	1♠	2◇	Pass
2NT	Pass	3NT	Dbl. (1)
Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the spade 2, feeling sure his partner's Takeout Double had been based on spade strength. Mr. Liston won the trick with the spade King. Feeling quite sure that Declarer's hand contained the spade Queen and that even though he should establish the thirteenth spade for West, West could not regain the lead to cash it, he led the diamond King. He knew that South, regardless of his diamond holding, could not refuse this trick with his club suit as yet unestablished, and he knew that South must surely have a strong club suit to justify his bidding, even not vulnerable. Mr. Liston reasoned that his partner's only possible card of entry must be the diamond Queen, and unless he held the diamond Queen the hand could not be set anyway. Declarer played as expected, winning with the diamond Ace so as to take an immediate round of clubs. When he led the club seven from Dummy, Mr. Liston played the Ace immediately, and then the Ace and 3 of spades. Now Declarer was helpless, since his only possible ninth trick was in the diamond suit, and to establish that trick he had to give West the lead and allow the last spade to be cashed for East and West's fifth trick.

Even a superexpert could not be censured for reading the East hand as containing the King-Queen-9 of diamonds and making the same mistake which Mr. Liston made so easy for the Declarer in this hand.

Casseroles, Glass Dishes Reduce Serving Time

When a member of the family group is serving the meal, it is desirable to reduce to a minimum the time that must be spent away from the table. This may be accomplished by having fewer courses or by serving the food in combination cooking and serving dishes. Casseroles and oven glass platters reduce labor in the kitchen as well as in the dining room. Large trays, when used to bring food and dishes to and from the kitchen, cut down the number of trips considerably.

Semiformal Sweater Is Offered for Evening

An evening sweater for semiformal wear has been launched by an intrepid American designer who is giving her Parisienne sisters a grand run for their money in the matter of originality. Her newest and most daring inspiration has so recently appeared that it is impossible to say as yet what measure of success it will have. The sweater is the jumper type, made of red silk braid combined with white wool crocheted bands. It looks quite slithering and gay when worn with a floor-length skirt of black satin, fitted in sculptured lines over the hips and released at the knees in voluminous fullness.

She Writes Bad Checks, But Not on Her Friends!

East St. Louis, Ill. (AP).—Ruth Wilson, 20, readily admitted, police said, that she had passed worthless checks for $28.

"But," police quoted her as saying, "I have never passed bad checks on a friend. Anyone who cashes a check for a stranger deserves to lose his money. I have found it easy for a good-looking young woman to get money on checks."

Cafe Just Like A Bit of Paris Greets Capital

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Some time ago the proprietor of a Connecticut avenue food shop announced he'd have a delightful surprise for us soon. Yesterday he called to say it was all ready and a real treat.

Away we flew on the wings of curiosity. Up to the second floor and into a room which might have been freshly imported from the continent. Modernistic wall treatment, semicircular side table alcoves, shining black and silver chairs, dim-paneled side lights, recall the Savoy bar in London. Spotless wite cloths, shining silver, black-suited waiters, against a blue and mauve background, suggest a Parisian cafe.

Blues ranging from noon sky color to deep twilight shades are employed artistically in the heavy silk covering of the wall seats and the angular building silhouettes against the wall. Side vases of bright flowers bring out the deeper tones and add a touch of gayety.

A back room, which at present is being used to seat diners, but has more interesting potentialities which might take effect after Congress convenes, is named after the merry-go-round pictured on its floor. The panels of the walls are adorned each with a question mark which signifies not only "what" but "who." Every Thursday until the whole wall is covered the marks will give place to interesting caricatures of well-known people about Washington who have consented to be thus represented.

And among other things is the menu. For $1 you may order a dinner including celery, olives, a cocktail, consomme, steak or chicken, vegetables, salad, dessert, cheese and coffee. For 75 cents there's a complete dinner and another for 55 cents, which invites a choice of shrimps and scallops a la Newburg, fried sweetbread a la Maryland, veal steak saute with fresh mushrooms, or chow mein.

No matter whether it's spring, summer, fall or winter, there's always a season for Dutch suppers. At noontime call it luncheon, in the early evening, dinner, and at midnight, a feast, but a Dutch supper is a Dutch supper for a' that and that and that.

In planning for one it's nice to have two or three kinds of cheese, strong, weak and medium, both salty crackers and plain ones; rye bread, certainly, and a plate of assorted cold meats, celery and olives, if you like, and beer, of course.

A downtown bakery has an ideal kind of rye bread to suit your supper. It's made with a cheese blend and is delicious served plain and even more so when toasted. You may buy this for 12 cents a loaf.

If your poor budget groans every month from the weight of the gas bill, by all means give it a chance to balance itself from now on. How? By using one of the top-of-the-stove ovens which fit over one burner. These are on sale at extremely reasonable prices in a large department store.

They not only save gas, but they're much quicker than the regular oven.

Most modern housewives who take an interest in their homes like to feel proud of their kitchen as they do any other room. The only way to do this is to see that it is clean and neat in appearance and thoroughly equipped.

Probably one of the most useful things you could purchase for it is an enamel refrigerator set. This includes one large container and two small ones, each with a separate cover.

They're handy to keep the leftovers in and may be used to reheat the food.

The dessert problem is one of the trials of the meal planner. Tonight, however, let her mind rest at ease, for she can buy some whip cream puffs with chocolate icing and cream inside which positively melt in your mouth. And all she'll have to pay is 10 cents each!

Jewelry this fall is one of the essential items of milady's costume. A noted shop which specializes in dresses has an intriguing supply to match any frock in a wardrobe. Among the assortment are some little colored metal bracelets selling three for $1.25. Suppose you had a deep purple dress, can you imagine anything lovelier with it than three bracelets, one of lavender, one of rose and one of the deep purple? You may chose your own color combinations.

You can make your husband sweet whether he naturally is or not with one of the shaving sets on sale in an F street store. There's a tube of delicately scented shaving cream and a bottle of after-shaving lotion, both of which are sure to please him.

Here's a splendid chance for a delightful surprise package particularly adapted to smooth over domestic difficulties, and well worth the dollar it's selling for.

New Kitchens With Modern Equipment Fly Blue Eagle for Less Work Hours

Directed by Amos Parrish

Information as to where styles of the kitchen furnishings illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department of The Washington Post on request.

The New Deal kitchen can certainly hang a Blue Eagle above its door if it wants to. Less work and shorter hours is its motto. And operating in one of them, the housewife can plan on quite a bit more time for sociabilities or rest.

At the Century of Progress we noted with much interest the keen attention given by visitors (men as well as women) to the kitchens in the Model Homes.

Those kitchens were planned to shorten the hours spent in them. None of them was large. But the space was ample, since none of it was wasted, with a place for everything, and everything within easy reach. And they were equipped with the newest labor-saving machinery and tools.

How very compact yet efficient a modern kitchen can be is shown by the sketch. Note particularly these points:

1. The ceiling is dropped to the top of the cupboard leaving no hard-to-reach tops for dust to collect on.

Inclosed Sink.

2. The sink is inclosed. Underneath, where you can't see them, are the garbage container, scrap basket and rods for dish towels.

3. Under the counter at the left of the sink are open bins for vegetables.

4. Below the drain board at the right is storage space for cooking utensils.

5. And one step takes you from this corner where cooking utensils and materials are stored to the stove.

The part of the kitchen not sketched contains a refrigerator, china cabinets and a table and benches for breakfast.

It isn't necessary to attend the Century of Progress to see some of the new labor-and-time saving kitchen devices. Stores are full of them.

Lids for Stoves.

New gas stoves, for instance, with lids to go over the burners when not burning, making additional counter space. (Electric stoves have them, too.)

Gas burner grates now have a hard, smooth finish which makes cleaning practically effortless. And two storage drawers in a stove are not at all uncommon.

Everything is planned to make the kitchen more attractive. Gleaming copper cooking utensils . . . tables with enameled plaid tops . . . cannisters painted by artists . . . color everywhere even in your stove.

Send for Color Samples.

Color is important in other parts of the home, too . . . new colors and combinations. We've made up a set of these applying them to different rooms and showing just what combinations to make in floors, draperies and furniture. If you'd like it, send the filled-in coupon with requested inclosures.

Teeth Are Held Most Important Beauty Adjunct

Science Reveals That Diet Is Vital to Their Well-Being.

"What beautiful teeth!" Time and again is the compliment heard, but few, indeed, are those who stop to consider what makes the difference between white, well-formed teeth and those which are uneven, discolored and decaping.

More and more scientists are coming to realize the importance which proper diet plays in building perfect teeth and in preventing tooth decay.

Not only is proper diet necessary for the growing child; it is necessary for the mother before the child is born. And it is necessary throughout adult life, if tooth decay is to be held to a minimum.

Proper Diet.

Proper diet means that the meals should include protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins. Especially are minerals and vitamins important in building good teeth and keeping them sound.

Calcium and phosphorus are the hardening elements of teeth, but in order that they be properly utilized by the system the two must be balanced properly and vitamin D must be present.

Recent investigation seems to indicate that phosphorus plays a much more important part in the normal building of teeth and prevention of tooth decay than formerly was thought. It is well known that meat is the very best source of this element. Calcium is found most abundantly in milk, cheese and certain vegetables and fruits, such as cauliflower and oranges.

Sunshine Has It.

Vitamin D is obtained from the ultrat-violet rays of sunshine, but at times of the year when the body receives little sunshine, it is necessary to turn to foods for this property. Cod liver oil is the richest known source of this vitamin.

Egg yolk and butter also are rich in vitamin D.

In common foods, a balanced diet will be one which includes meat, fresh vegetables, fruits and milk in sufficient quantities to furnish essential elements to the body. Of course, not every food element need be included at every meal; but the safe thing is to plan so that each will be included in the day's menu.

A little forethought in the matter of food will save expenditure of needless time and money in repairing teeth. It will save hours of agonizing toothache; and bring you a great deal of justifiable pleasure, when people compliment you on your appearance of glowing health. Nothing is more attractive than a smile which reveals beautiful teeth!

Washington Women in Welfare Work

MRS. S. F. TALIAFERRO.

Mrs. S. F. Taliaferro Devotes Efforts to Hospital For Women.

President of the women's board and also a director of the Columbia Hospital for Women, Mrs. Sidney F. Taliaferro devotes a great deal of her welfare activities to this institution. She also finds time to serve as member of the boards of the Associated Charities, Neighborhood House, the Washington Committee on Frontier Nursing and as a member of the executive committee of the Washington Community Chest Women Crusaders.

Mrs. Taliaferro was a founding member of the board of the Washington Mental Hygiene Society and a member of the board of the Episcopal Home for Children. She is a trustee of the Community Chest and in the first campaign was the only woman team captain in the special gifts unit, of which she still is a member.

"Since the Government has assumed the greater part of local outdoor relief," she says, "through the granting of funds to the Board of Public Welfare for disbursement by the emergency relief committee, the women of Washington now must turn their energies to the bettering of conditions in the hospitals, the so-called character-building agencies and the many other local outlets for helpful and constructive work where the personal touch is invaluable.

"There never has been greater need for the women to volunteer their help to alleviate human suffering in Washington this winter.

"My interest in Columbia Hospital for Women is of long standing and is greatly stimulated by the tremendous work done by the prenatal clinic, which has helped thousands of expectant mothers to weather the hardships of these times successfully."

Poetry—Whole Bookful Saves Girl From Bullet

She was reading from the book as the bullet, accidently fired from her brother's gun, struck it. Physicians said the reason Miss Gardiner's wound was only superficial was that the book deflected the bullet.

No End of Books

Objections Made by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Ludwig Lewisohn Halt Publication of Books on Their Husbands.

Edith Gittings Reid has completed a biography of Wilson, to be entitled "Woodrow Wilson, the Caricature, the Myth and the Man." But because Mrs. Wilson objects to the use of several letters therein, publication is suspended until matters can be straightened out.

In the same vein, 16 pages of Adolph Gillis' monograph on Ludwig Lewisohn have had to be rewritten and reprinted to accord with certain views advanced by Mrs. Lewisohn. That Mr. and Mrs. Lewisohn are now separated does not seem to affect this example of connubial zeal.

The New Republic for this week contains an excellent estimate of Ring Lardner's literary position, written by F. Scott Fitzgerald. "Ring," by the way, is a shortening of Lardner's Christian name of "Ringgold."

Books change the world. A Chinese-American restaurant on West Forty-ninth street, New York, now does business under the name of "The Good Earth."

Editor Studies New Deal.

"THE ROOSEVELT PROGRAM." by Cleveland Rodgers; Putnam's, $2.

Beginning with the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt as President, this book makes a comprehensive review and analysis of the various economic and political activities which have been initiated up to September 4 of the present year.

The abandonment of the gold standard, monetary and banking legislation, action on relief and reform, farm relief, railroad policies and the National Industrial Recovery Act, are subjects treated in language understandable to the layman.

While betraying a strong admiration and approval of the President's methods and ideas, the author is eminently fair in crediting the previous administration with establishing many agencies and policies now proving their value in helping the country toward recovery.

The historical attitude of the Democratic and Republican parties is checked against the Roosevelt program, together with the party platforms and the speeches of both candidates in the last Presidential campaign. In addition to the National program the new administration's attitude toward war debts, the London Conference issues, Soviet Russia and other foreign policies is presented similarly.

Possibly the most significant chapter in the book is that in which provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution are pointed out as a menace to effective government control over corporations and business.

Much of the material in this book has been published anonymously in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, of which Mr. Rogers is editor, but it is claimed that in this volume the complete plans and policies of the Roosevelt administration have been brought together for the first time.

GEORGE H. BARROWS.

True Love in Florida.

A novel, "ENCHANTED GROUND," by Temple Bailey; Penn, $2.

This is the story of the romance between a young doctor left behind the boom in Florida and a girl who goes down there to live. Rival sweethearts for each of them, a young preacher and wife doing their best for the poverty-stricken folk of Florida, an old lady dying of an incurable malady—these complicate a plot which winds up to a climax in the midst of a hurricane. That's that.

"Enchanted Ground" seems to be Temple Bailey's idea of love in the depression, but it's pretty hard to work up sympathy for any of her characters. They all seem a bit nebulous. The story is the usual Temple Bailey plot, in a little different setting—beautiful heroine loved by two men and not knowing quite what to do about it.

For late vacationists here's a book to stick into your bag. Guaranteed not to tax the most fatigued mind, it won't matter even if you fall asleep over the yarn. You can pick up where you left off, or several pages farther on.

MARY TINLEY DALY.

Gardening Family.

A narrative, "IN A WEEK-END GARDEN," by Maud Stewart Welch; Sears, $2.50.

In the simple story of "In a Week-End Garden," we learn how one city family went "Swiss Family Robinson" within an hour's drive of Manhattan.

Properly speaking, the book isn't any more about the garden than it is about the family and the house. The story covers a year, each chapter telling about a month. The Welches enjoyed their shore house during the snowbound New England winter as well as the gentler seasons. They appreciated the brown marshes, the gray combers, the steely downs, the orange sunsets of the cold months. These hardy souls even cleared up their garden during a January thaw.

There are humor, ease and color in the narration. It has the atmosphere of a family life, both active and serene. For the amateur gardener the book is a store of useful knowledge and proved experience. Others will relish the flavor of the narrative—a mingled bouquet of sea scent, garden annuals and good cooking. It also makes one remember the pleasure one had in reading "Cranford," and "Elizabeth and Her German Garden."

Youngsters Get Opportunity for Symphony Play

H. Emerson Meyers Will Conduct Trial Auditions at Central High.

If one symphony is good, two are better.

Washington's Junior Symphony will open its second season with a rehearsal Saturday morning in Central High School auditorium. Approximately 50 young musicians between the ages of 15 and 21 are expected to attend.

The purpose of the Junior Symphony is to give young musicians opportunity to become acquainted with good music literature, and to gain experience in ensemble playing.

H. Emerson Meyers, the conductor, says: "I want to start the orchestra rehearsing rather simple things, and gradually work-up into some of the less difficult symphonies.

"I feel if these young people have opportunity to work together, they will broaden in experience and be fitted eventually to play in a first-class orchestra.

"Nearly all the instruments are represented," says Mr. Meyers. "We have no bassoon or double bass as yet. We haven't a harp, but we can do without one at the present time."

Sullivan, Ind., (AP). — Martha Drennan's birthday party is "off" until National Guardsmen lift the 9 p. m. curfew imposed on this troubled mine town.

She asked the guardsmen to allow her guests to stay until a later hour. They said no.

Diadems and Headbands Grace Evening Coiffures

Sweet young things struggling with hair in the "between permanents" stage, find in the evening coiffure a maddening problem. Vionet, Lanvin, and other designers have taken pity on their plight by creating diadems and headbands which transform an ordinary "hank of hair" into a thing of loveliness. The girl with the too-round face will look positively ethereal and Gish-like when she bedecks her tresses with the Russian type of diadem. The woman whose features incline to the classic, gains becoming dignity with the Grecian type of headdress. Either is the quintessence of chic for wear with the season's most ravishing evening gowns.

What Today Means

"Libra."

If October 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 to 9:20 a. m., from 1:20 to 2 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12 noon, from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 9:45 to 10:15 p. m.

You will probably feel restless on this date and will find it difficult to dig into your work; nothing of a lasting nature will be accomplished. People will be inclined to race through their conversations and you will find it difficult to get a word in edgewise. You will not get much attention from your children.

The child born on this October 14 will waste a great deal of time and will not show an active interest in things about him; he will probably be much the dreamer, though it will be difficult at times to tell if he is thinking about anything at all. Will probably have a great love for animals and will enjoy life in the country.

If October 14 is the date of your birth, in your unhurried and untroubled way you will accomplish a great deal more than many who create a great furor as they go about their daily duties. You are a thoroughly dependable person; once you say you will do a thing, it is as good as done. You take a great deal of pain with all that you do and never do you slight details. The women have nimble fingers and many of them do surprisingly fine needlework, some of them gaining a livelihood in that manner. These people are never idle a moment, and even when they sit down to rest they are actively engaged in mental labors, planning and figuring out things.

Born on October 14, you probably are a person of judgment; even about your own problems you can be most unbiased. You despise trickery of any sort and people who are not absolutely above board in all that they do can not be friends of yours. It is possible that you are extremely sensitive; often your feelings are hurt solely through an imaginary slight. You are not the type to go out and make many friends; most of your intimates are those who have sought you out. Many come to you with their confidences. These you keep faithfully and to the best of your ability you give advice, but only when it is called for. You are the type of person whose family will center about you, not because of any willing it on your part, but simply because you are you. Few people will ever try to put over anything on you.

Denver (AP).—Carl Suppes, jr., 14, started to school, but went deer hunting instead — and bagged his buck. While en route to classes he decided deer hunting held greater attraction and hich-hiked to his uncle's ranch at Salida. A telephone call to his parents explained his disappearance.

Cucumbers Excellent and Cheap; Some Surprising Recipes Offered.

Despite the fact that cucumbers on the market now are among the finest for a long time, they aren't enjoying the popularity which was theirs during the summer months. Many people regard them almost exclusively as a salad vegetable—a rank injustice to the cucumber. They may be fried, breaded, glazed and stuffed to offer pleasing variations to a menu.

To fry them, cut some peeled cucumbers in slices a quarter of an inch thick by one and three-quarters inches in diameter; empty out the center seed parts with a three-quarter inch diameter tube; salt over for 15 minutes, wipe, dip them in flour and fry to a fine golden color in very hot golden fat.

You bread them by cutting the cucumbers in two-inch lengths and then once across in the center; peel, remove the inner seeds, round the corners, and cook them in salted water. Drain, wipe, immerse in beaten eggs, bread-crumb English style, and fry to a nice color, having fennel sauce served apart.

Glazed Cucumbers.

Glazed cucumbers are prepared by splitting them crosswise into two-inch pieces, having them an inch and a half in diameter, and each of these lengthways and across to obtain four quarters. Peel and remove the seeds; pare them into the shape of cloves, add garlic and cook in salted water; drain, wipe on a cloth and put them in a thin sautoir with melted butter to reduce their humidity, then pour off the butter and moisten with some gravy, letting this fall to a glaze.

Stuffer cucumbers are somewhat more complicated to cook, but they're well worth your efforts. Peel them and cut them in inch lengths; empty each piece with a vegetable spoon, retaining a quarter of an inch at the bottom. Blanch, then cook in consomme and drain. Fry a little onion in butter, add some chopped mushrooms, evaporate their humidity, then throw in some chopped truffles and parsley, also a little gravy. Simmer and add soaked and well-pressed bread crumbs and raw egg yolks. Stuff the cucumbers with this, stand them on a dish and bestrew the cucumbers with bread crumbs and a little grated parmesan, pour over melted butter and finish cooking brown in a moderate oven. Dress in a vegetable dish on a little half glaze sauce.

They're Cheap.

And besides these dainty dishes, cucumbers are good for something else—the budget. You can buy nice large ones for five cents apiece.

As the cantaloupes leave the market, honeydew melons become the general melon favorites. To insure their popularity they've just dropped from their usual price of 19 cents to 15 cents.

The housewife who is interested in the attractive appearance of her table usually finds a place for the rosy radishes. They add a fresh, crispy touch to a meal, as well as color to the table. And now that they're down to five cents for two bunches, we've no doubt they'll be taken to full advantage.

Johnson Fixes NRA Definition Of "Executive"

Only Employes Actually Doing Managerial Duty Included.

Who are managers and who are executives?

Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chief, yesterday answered the question. He has been receiving reports that certain minor employes are given titles such as "assistant manager" to exempt them from maximum-hour restrictions of the Presidential reemployment agreement.

"In the President's reemployment agreement," the administrator's definition said, "it is provided that the maximum hours shall not apply 'to employes in a managerial or executive capacity who now receive more than $35 per week.'

"There are provisions in various codes exempting from the limitation upon hours those described as 'managers' or 'executives' and complaint has been received that in many instances employes are classified as 'managers' or 'executives' either for the purpose, or with the result, of exempting them from limitations upon hours.

"It has not been the intention of the administration in approving such exemptions to provide exemption of any person other than those who exercise real managerial or executive authority, which persons are invested with responsibilities entirely different from those of the wage earner.

"It will be presumed that no employe receiving less than $35 per week will be classified as a 'manager' or 'executive' so as to be exempt from any provision of any code regulating the maximum hours of work permitted in a trade or industry.

"Violations of the requirements of any code, as here interpreted, should be reported to the National Recovery Administration."

Stores Favor Ads in Papers

Newspaper space forms the predominant type of advertising among chain stores, the Federal Trade Commission revealed yesterday in a report.

More than 86 per cent of the 1,000 chains reporting used newspaper advertising, the commission stated. Only three chain fields, tobacco, men's shoes and dry goods, reported that less than 50 per cent of their advertising expenditures went to newspapers.

"Chain store advertising, which is predominantly newspaper advertising, frequently has been cited as an important factor in the growth of such companies," the report said.

Millinery, variety and furniture stores declared newspapers accounted for more than 90 per cent of their total advertising expenditures, the report said. Grocery and meat chains reported 72.2 per cent for newspaper advertising; grocery chains, 72.8 per cent; drug chains, 76.2 per cent, and department store chains, 60.4 per cent.

News of Washington's Churches

"Doctrine of Atonement" Christian Science Sermon.

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from II Corinthians 5:18: "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbors, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost. I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance." (Luke, 15:6, 7.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The followers of Christ drank his cup.

"Ingratitude and persecution filled it to the brim; but God pours the riches of His love into the understanding and affections, giving us strength according to our day. Sinners flourish 'like a green bay tree;' but, looking farther, the Psalmist could see their end,—the destruction of sin through suffering." (Page 5.)

"Rethinking Christianity," Clinchy Sermon Topic.

Fair Shows Antioch Relic

Many Scholars Believe It to Be Cup From Which Jesus Drank at the Last Supper; Growth and Organization of Early Christianity Sketched.

By William T. Ellis.

Most interesting and precious of all the exhibits at the Chicago Exposition is the Antioch Chalice, which many scholars believe to be the very cup from which Jesus drank at the Last Supper. This priceless relic bears the name of Antioch, because it was found there. The cup, now encased in silver ornamented with figures, is indubitably of very great antiquity; and it was not unnatural it should have been preserved and reverenced in Antioch, the city which soon outstripped Jerusalem as a center of active Christian life and work. Many a visitor to the fair has gone home to study anew the story of the Last Supper; and the location and history of Antioch.

And Antioch is a fascinating theme for study. When I went down from Aleppo to Antioch there was much hubbub and concern over the bandit-infested highway.

Tells of a City's Fame—And Shame.

In the first century of our era, Antioch was the third city in the world, only Alexandria and Rome surpassing it. The population was about half a million. It dated from the days of Alexander the Great.

Five miles below the city lay the Grove of Daphne, famed seat of licentiousness, as readers of "Ben Hur" will recall. Today the grove is tumbled ruins, but its crystalline springs are a joyous memory. All the vices of the East, as well as the learning and sophistication of the West, met in Antioch, which was both famous and infamous.

Yet Antioch became the great center of Christian activity in the first century. What doughty souls those early Christians were! They went up against Rome and Alexandria and Antioch as conquerors, and they wrested the ancient fame from them and made them celebrated as Christian capitals. Today the church is a compromising body, and therefore not a conquering force.

Despite Peter's vision, and the deliverance of the Jerusalem Council, the Church at first was almost exclusively a Jewish body. But converts in cosmopolitan Cyprus and Cyrene and Phoenicia—see the map—carried the good news to the Gentiles also, especially in Antioch. So notable was this increase in believers in Antioch, that the Mother Church sent their sagacious statesman, Barnabas, to Syria to look into the matter.

Let us tarry for a moment with this big man Barnabas. He is the one who had been open-minded enough to vouch for convert Saul to the Jerusalem Christians. He evidently had those qualities of detachment, spacious-mindedness, tolerance and far-sightedness which mark the truly great man.

Most of us know men of this type who are the real leaders of the Church. They care less for precedent than for progress; less for convention than for conversion. In every church difficulty they are the pacificators and prophets.

Silent Years of Saul.

At this time, Barnabas was the big man, and Paul was merely his protege. In these early narratives the name of Barnabas was put first. "He was a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit and faith." When he came upon a condition, as at Antioch, that was beyond his own powers to handle adequately, he looked about for the right man for the place. And his mind turned to Saul, who was somewhere in Tarsus.

Only by an occasional allusion do we know anything of Saul's years of seclusion, between his conversion, and his emergence upon the scene at Antioch, under the guidance of Barnabas. We know he had spent three years in the desert, and other long years, apparently unknown, in Tarsus. The text seems to indicate Barnabas had difficulty in finding him.

Out of those quiet years, which laid firmly his philosophical understanding of Christ, came the greatness of the Apostle Paul—plus, of course, his native character, early training and later activities. Says the old proverb, "The time is not wasted that is spent in sharpening the scythe." Preparation spells power. Out of the studies and meditations, devotions and raptures, of those unchronicled years of Paul came nurture for all the church throughout the subsequent centuries. He had been making ready—and Antioch was his opportunity.

For a year, Barnabas and Saul worked together in Antioch, and won many converts. So important did the new movement grow that the cynical and sophisticated citizens, probably in derision, coined a new name for the disciples of Jesus—"Christians."

It is a mongrel Greek and Latin word; but it has lived, and today is the proudest appellation of mortal. Applied as a term of opprobrium, it has become a badge of honor. Every time we use the name Christian, we are linked with old Antioch, which lives in human memory chiefly because of this one word.

Great Brotherhood.

Recently news dispatches carried brief accounts, unintelligible to most readers, of the massacre of Assyrian Christians in Irak, and of the exile of their patriarch, or pope, Mar Shimmun, to Cyprus. One might have expected Christian leaders of the world to be heard on this subject. But no. We get "manifestoes" from churchmen on the Mooney case, the Scottsboro case, the West Virginia miners, &c., but nothing about the plight of this homeless ancient people, remnant of the ancient Nestorian Church, which, in the early centuries, sent missionaries to far China.

Brotherhood ties have weakened among Christians since the days when the disciples in rich Antioch, "every man according to his ability," sent relief to the Christians in Jerusalem, who were suffering from famine.

Not many centuries later, after the Roman Empire had become Christian, Emperor Julian the Apostate called the people back to the worship of the ancient Roman deities. He arranged a great demonstration at Antioch; but in vain, confessing, in a phrase that has lived, "Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean."

Guarded News Sources Urged

Law Should Protect Press in Keeping Confidences, Prof. Siebert Says.

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Newspapermen should be allowed immunity from divulging news sources and violating confidences, Prof. F. S. Siebert, of the University of Illinois, said today at the convention of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity.

He pointed out that only Maryland and New Jersey now recognize the right of the press to protect news sources. Prof. Siebert, teacher of journalism and member of the bar, said:

"Inviolability of confidences is part of the ethics of journalism. If it is good ethics, it is good law.

"It is in the public interest that a free flow of news be maintained, since the press constitutes a check on governmental offices such as no constitution ever has been able to provide.

"It is necessary for all newspapermen to protect news sources important to them if they are to serve the public adequately. Unwilling to violate the trust placed in them as individuals and eager to bring to light the festering conditions they often discover, they will go to jail rather than divulge news sources.

Bomb Caused Air Disaster, Probe Theory

Department of Commerce aeronautical inspectors and Department of Justice agents yesterday investigated the possibility that explosion of a time bomb might have sent a huge three-mile-a-minute air liner crashing last Tuesday near Chicago, killing seven persons.

D. B. Colyer, vice president of the United Air Lines, last night said laboratory tests at Northwestern University showed the wreck was caused "by a high explosive," according to an Associated Press dispatch.

Pieces of twisted fuselage, the side of a bottle, bits of passengers' luggage from the plane which carried seven to their deaths, were put under microscopic examinations. Investigators said they bore stains possibly caused by nitroglycerine or gunpowder.

Air Mail Carrier.

The charred remains of the plane were twisted and torn by a blast. Witnesses said they heard an explosion from the ship as it roared along 1,000 feet up.

In Washington, officials of the Commerce Department aeronautical branch awaited a report on the investigation.

The Federal inquiry was started because the ship carried mail and interstate shipments. Melvin H. Purvis, head of the Chicago bureau of investigation, sent three men to the scene close to Chesterton, Ind.

Purvis' men brought back the stained wreckage. It was examined by Prof. Leonarde Keeler and Dr. Clarence Muehlberger of the Northwestern University scientific crime detection laboratory.

Not a Gasoline Blast.

"Our evidence indicates the crash was caused by an explosion," Purvis said. "If it was an explosion, a time bomb seems to be the only answer.

"Any theory that a passenger might have wrecked the plane for suicide seems far-fetched."

Carl Davis, Porter County coroner, expressed belief in the bomb theory. Department of Commerce investigators withheld comment. Colyer said it was not determined whether it was a bomb that caused the explosion.

Colyer's statement said:

"Despite a thorough investigation by interested Federal organizations, it has not been possible to ascertain why the explosion was on the plane. There is conclusive evidence that there was no gasoline explosion or fire in the air, and no structural failure of the airplane until the explosion."

Purvis informed the Associated Press that he would have no announcement to make until his investigation was completed.

"All angles of the case will be gone into thoroughly," he said, "and investigations will be carried on at all places the plane touched. The result of our investigations and those of the Department of Commerce probably will be announced from Washington."

Court Ponders Pleas In Vaccination Case

The controversy over admittance of the two children of H. H. Entz, Treasury Department employe, to the District public schools was taken under advisement yesterday by Justice F. D. Letts in District Supreme Court.

Attorneys for the District and for Entz argued the question of whether the children had been "duly" vaccinated. Both were kept out of school when authorities previously decided neither had been vaccinated according to law.

Irish "Gypsy"

Girl's Death Flashed to Horse Trading Clan.

Atlanta, Oct. 13 (AP).—Three-year-old Mary Frances O'Hara is dead and the word was flashed today throughout a hundred Southern communities among Irish horse traders. She was a member of the Irish "Gypsy" Clan.

Today aunts, uncles and cousins, numbering thousands, were notified.

Her body will be buried temporarily until April 28, when members of the clan will come to Atlanta. By a clan custom, the Irish horse traders hold annual burial services. The bodies of all who die during the year are held until then.

Radio Waves and Ripples

If it is all right with the NRA, Flier Al Williams will pilot a plane to Norfolk tomorrow bearing three Blue Eagle banners to the Byrd Antarctic expedition. One will be for flying from the flagship Ruppert, another from the icebreaker Bear, the third to be dropped as the Byrd plane sails over the pole.

What will happen at the pole will depend for its success entirely upon a gadget engineers will attache to the plane banner.

The gadget, when it hits the ice, is expected to set up a series of electrical disturbances to be picked up by the plane's radio, transmitted to the Little America receiver, relayed again to the Buenos Aires pickup and sent straight on to the White House to turn on a light bulb so President Roosevelt may know everything's fine at the pole.

Heard during the Lum and Abner wedding broadcast from Washington Auditorium last night were WRC's Marie Fowler, Dixie Harmonies, Bert Bagranoff, Stanley (Senator Pinhead) Simmons, a Rudolf Schramm band, George (One-Man Minstrel) Reid, Four Jacks and a Joker and N. B. C. Impersonator Jerome Mann.

Heard in the auditorium show but not broadcast were Three Aces and the Hanna Sisters.

The performers labored for three hours, hard and well, but no harder or more effectively than the minds who had to see to everything, including the bridesmaids and dress clothes for Lum and Abner.

Louisiana Representative Riley Wilson's home town of Ruston was having a celebration Thursday night to be climaxed by President Roosevelt's pushing a button in the White House to turn on 6,000 newly installed street lights.

Wilson didn't want to make a speech, but he did want the Nation to know what was taking place down in Ruston. So he went to WJSV's Harry Butcher.

Butcher arranged for a C. B. S. station in Philadelphia to tell all about Ruston lights a few minutes before the President pressed the button.

Money Asked For Rivers

27 Billions Sent Abroad Should Have Been Used Here, Says Lundeen.

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Representative Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota, told delegates to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress that the Government since the war has expended in Europe $27,000,000,00 that should have been used for waterways and public works at home.

"The Government should provide immediate funds to finish its waterways projects," said Lundeen, who is a member of the House Flood Control Committee. "It would partly solve unemployment, besides being of lasting benefit to the country."

The Federal Government would have to amend the flood control act so that the States would not be forced to pay for a levee right of way, if it expected to continue flood control work in Louisiana, it was said by Wade O. Martin, chairman of the State's flood control committee.

"Under the present act, payment for this right of way would amount to a tax of $28 an acre on the land affected," he said. "The people of the State can not pay it."

District Starts Aiding Drifters In Few Weeks

Shelter, Food and Help in Gaining Work on Proposed Program.

Federal care for homeless wanderers in the District will be launched within a few weeks.

Arthur S. Rosichan, director, yesterday said he hoped to have working plans in order next week. He does not desire to establish District transient aid before neighboring States start caring for their wanderers, he said, fearing a flood of homeless folk might converge on Washington.

The Board of Public Welfare requested $60,000 for the project from the Emergency Relief Administration.

Cases to Be Studied.

Although the District plan is not ready for announcement, it was learned that wanderers will be given shelter, that must pass official inspection for cleanliness, substantial clothing, food, rehabilitative work, and case study by trained workers to help depression victims reestablish themselves.

Present shelters which can pass the Government's hygienic qualifications will be used. Medical attention will be available. Federal instructions provided for laundry, bathing and barbering.

Care will be taken to segregate those being helped according to their needs. Young persons will not be quartered with olders ones, and able individuals will not be given the same routine care as chronic drifters.

Begging to Be Curbed.

Mr. Rosichan envisioned separate care for individuals requiring such treatment.

The program, it was said, will mark an end to the system of "kicking along" wanderers. Officials hope to curb street begging materially.

Standards Bureau Official Promoted

E. C. Crittenden Becomes Assistant Director.

E. C. Crittenden yesterday became assistant director of the Bureau of Standards in charge of research and testing. He filled the vacancy caused last June when Dr. L. J. Briggs was appointed director.

Crittenden will continue his duties as chief of the division of electricity. He has been in the bureau since July 1, 1909, when he was appointed assistant physicist.

He became head of the electricity division in 1921.

Grant for Armory Plans Requested

Commissioners Ask Ickes for $52,000 Fund.

The District Commissioners yesterday forwarded to Secretary Ickes a request for an immediate public works grant of $50,000 to draft plans for a new National Guard armory

The letter was sent despite Mr. Ickes' declaration that he was disinclined to approve a grant for plans unless money for actual construction was forthcoming. The Commissioners several months ago asked $1,250,000 to build the armory.

Fined in Drunk Case, Driver Plans to Appeal

Fined $103.90 in Marlboro court yesterday for reckless driving and driving while intoxicated, William Sullinger, 1843 Massachusetts avenue southeast, noted appeal.

John Jackson, Oxon Hill, Md., was sentenced to three years in jail for assaulting James Dolton, also of Oxon Hill.

Charged with transportation and possession of whisky, James Mason, Alexandria, Va., paid a fine of $50 and costs.

City Welfare Opens Last 2 Relief Stations

Opening of the last two District branch relief stations was announced yesterday by Paul L. Kirby, assistant welfare director. They are in the Banneker Building, 2458 Eighth street, and Cordoza School, First and I streets southwest.

F. W. RICHARDSON, Post Staff Photo.

(Uncle Tudy), who today completes 53 years as county and circuit clerk of Fairfax County. He has run unopposed since his second term.

Fairfax Court Office Held 109 Years in Same Family

F. W. Richardson Tells of Changes Through Half Century; Friends Say That He Will Be Reelected in 1935.

By Harold Stone
(Washington Post Roving Reporter.)

Fifty-three years ago today the late Judge James Sangster walked into the office of the county clerk in the old Fairfax County courthouse and called for the court's minute book. Ferdinand D. Richardson, the clerk, had died a few minutes before.

When the judge left, the minute book was inscribed with the following words: "In vacation, October 14, 1880—F. W. Richardson is this day appointed clerk of the county and circuit courts of Fairfax County to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of F. D. Richardson. (signed) J. Sangster."

Today, despite the fact that the clerkship is an elective office, F. W. Richardson—"Uncle Tudy" to half the population of Virginia—is still county and circuit clerk. Counting his 53 years in office, the job has been in his family 109 years.

Unopposed at Elections.

Despite his staunch Democratic loyalties he was appointed by a Republican judge and, since he defeated a Republican in his second election, has run unopposed each eight years since.

"Uncle Tudy" has seen some amazing developments since his appointment more than half a century ago. The horse and saddle has given way to the automobile. The quill pen and ink has been replaced by the typewriter. And there have been quite a few changes in the laws of the county.

"Why, when I was appointed," "Uncle Tudy" declared, "the first day of court was just like county fair day. The old railroad station was more than 3 miles from the courthouse and the folks rode in on horseback. An old stagecoach ran from the station.

Saw Bryan Nominated.

"Well, sir, there were three hotels in town and the judge and the lawyers used to get together in them and have some rare times—arguments were just as heated outside the courtroom as they were inside. Night court was often held to dispose of cases so the lawyers and their clients could go back to their homes and their work."

"Uncle Tudy" was a delegate to the Democratic national convention in Denver when Bryan was nominated the third time.

"Judge Sangster sure did get into hot water by naming me to succeed my father," he chuckled. "Some of his Republican friends came to him the next day with some one that they wanted appointed but he had beaten them to it. They wanted to know why he appointed a Democrat. He told them that where it was a balance between friendship and competence as against politics that politics could go to —— as far as he was concerned."

The next time "Uncle Tudy" ran for the clerkship Judge Sangster opposed him, but was defeated by a large majority.

Has Washington's Will.

"What was the outstanding thing that you have done since you were appointed?" he was asked.

"Nothing particularly outstanding," he replied. "I served as clerk of the draft board from this county and I would rather have gone to the trenches than heard some of these women weep and wail for their husbands and sweethearts."

As county clerk "Uncle Tudy" has the custody of the will of George Washington which he was instrumental in having recovered. Thousands of other documents dating back beyond Revolutionary days are in his files. He never missed a working day, legal holidays excepted, and stays at his office every hour of the day until closing time.

"Uncle Tudy" was born December 16, 1853. He celebrated his golden wedding anniversary two months ago. And, according to his friends, he will be up for reelection in 1935.

Life Saving Also Taught in Opportunity The Post Presents.

Of the many ways of observing "Keep Healthy" week, learning to swim has the advantage of being both an avenue to health and a means to safety. The Washington Post-Y. M. C. A. week offers facilities to Washington's men with leisure time to learn to swim and save life.

Athletic officials point out that swimming strengthens the lungs, develops muscles, is soothing to the nerves and is good for the circulatory system. It is generally admitted to be the most all-around beneficial form of exercise, as well as being a most popular amusement.

Swimming brings into play practically every muscle of the body without placing any particular strain on any one group of muscles.

Life saving, easily learned by a swimmer, is advocated by the Red Cross and many other organizations in an attempt to reduce the huge toll of loss of life from drowning. This year of the 240 persons who lost their lives on July 4, 81 or 34 per cent were drowned.

In 1932, 181 deaths occurred from drowning on the National holiday. Most drownings are among those who do not know how to swim.

Five or six lessons are often sufficient to learn to swim, the Y. M. C. A. points out. Nonswimmers who venture into deep water either by wading or in canoes or rowboats are taking a risk which might easily be eliminated.

The Post-Y. M. C. A. "Keep Healthy" week offers the chance to keep healthy and to learn to save human life.

"Bare" Facts Guide Pollard To Leave Nudist Colony Alone

Virginia nudists have nothing to fear from State authorities.

Gov. Pollard yesterday announced a hands-off policy toward the three-weeks-old nudist colony at Herndon.

The governor said he was unable to recall any law under which the State could eject any cult where there was no infringement on the rights of others.

Pollard added that he had "no doubt that any persons walking around unclothed in view of others who object will be dealt with properly by authorities of Fairfax County."

Pollard sought the "bare" facts in the situation after receiving a complaint Wednesday from Dr. Jane B. Coates, Washington, executive director of the American Antinudity League.

Twenty-five or 30 Washington and Alexandria residents are said to have started the Herndon colony on an 83-acre tract.

Life Insurance Group Elects Two Officers

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—John J. Morarity, vice president of the General American Life Insurance Co., St. Louis, was elected chairman today of the agency section of the American Life convention.

Aviation Derby Here Delayed Until Spring

Army Aircraft and Bolling Field Groups Can Not Take Part Now.

Aviation Day program of the Washington Air Derby Association, Inc., scheduled for October 28 at College Park Airport, has been postponed until next spring, it was announced yesterday.

Decision was made by officers and directors Thursday night, when it was learned the Army aircraft and personnel from Bolling Field could not participate.

Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, in a letter explained the department is forced to utilize all available flying hours for essential military training due to strict economy.

The Treasure Hunt of the association, scheduled for October 22, is to be held. The hunt will begin at 1:30 p. m., at the College Park Airport.

An annual trophy is to be awarded by the association to the person in Washington and its environs deemed to have done the most during the year for the advacement of aviation, it was announced yesterday

The first award will be made at a dinner early next year, Chester H. Warrington, president of the association, stated. Members of the committee to select the first winner are Lawrence Williams, Washington Board of Trade; Col. B. K. Yount, U. S. A.; Capt. W. C. Childs, U. S. N.; M. P. Hansom, Department of Commerce; H. C. Dickinson, Bureau of Standrads; George Brinckerhoff, College Park Airport, and Col. J. T. Rowell, U. S. M. C.

Roosevelt Weighs Rover Successor

Discusses 10 Candidates With Cummings.

President Roosevelt and Attorney General Cummings yesterday discussed a successor to U. S. Attorney Leo A. Rover and the status of liquor in the District after repeal.

Candidates for the post of prosecutor have been narrowed to about 10, the Attorney General said, with "about five out in front." He declined to make public the names but expects the selection will be made within 10 days.

Liquor licensing and control is the most difficult question of all, so far as the District is concerned, he said. There has been a weight of legal opinion which holds that the Volstead act may remain in force in the District after repeal. If this is so it is said Washington throats may remain parched until Congressional action removes the law.

Pilot Seniority In Merger Fixed

Ludington Men Lose Half Service Rating in Plan.

Pilots on the Ludington Line who went with the Eastern Air Transport when it absorbed the former, are entitled to a 50 per cent seniority rating, the National Labor Board decided yesterday.

Heretofore, the Eastern Air had placed these men, regardless of their ratings, at the bottom of its list.

The ruling will give each Ludington pilot one-half the time of his actual service with the former employer for the computation of his standing. Pilots of both lines have agreed to the proposal.

Hart Denies Guilt In Bad-Check Case

Defendant Allowed Time to Bring Witnesses.

Henry Otis Hart, 50, of Mount Moore, N. C., formerly an accountant with the F. H. Smith Co., investment house, pleaded not guilty in Police Court yesterday to passing a $100 worthless check.

Hart admitted to Judge John P. McMahon that he cashed the check through Thomas Mott, of the Mott Motor Co. He said the check was drawn on a bank in Davidson, N. C.

The case was continued until next week to allow Hart to produce defense witnesses.

Girl, 9, Who Lost Arm To Recover, Doctors Say

Improvement was noted yesterday in the condition of Mildred Dunn, 9, of 3510 Centre street northeast, whose arm was amputated at Garfield Hospital as result of an accident in the Bancroft School yard.

A swing broke under the girl October 3, fracturing her arm near the wrist. Amputation was necessary and for several days physicians held little hope for her recovery. She will recover, they said last night.

Slayer of Dry Agent Sentenced to Gallows

Missoula, Mont., Oct. 13 (AP).—William C. Cates, 42, convicted of slaying Paul A. Read, Federal prohibition agent, here, July 21, today was sentenced to be hanged December 8.

No Change

Roosevelt Refuses to Speed National Holiday.

There will be no change in Thanksgiving Day.

President Roosevelt yesterday rejected petitions from sales organizations requesting he proclaim the occasion for a week earlier to give them more time to promote sales between that holiday and Christmas.

The President refused, Stephen T. Early, one of his secretaries, explained, because of confusion that would result. The change also, he said, would interfere with railroad schedules and football games.

So Turkey Day will be November 30, the last Thursday in November, and, incidentally, the last day of the month, despite the many requests for an earlier date.

Stocks Drop 3.1 Points on Refund Move

Speculative Issues Lose; Sales Volume Rises to 1,264,405 Shares.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Financial markets today had their first opportunity to express reactions to the Government's Fourth Liberty Loan refunding offer and whatever implications it may have as to a monetary plan or policy. That expression, it developed, was a slump in speculative values, a strengthening in high-grade bonds and a sharp advance by the dollar, trends that conformed closely to the accepted pattern for markets which had lost some of their inflationary props.

Stocks and commodities weakened. The former behaved indecisively until afternoon, when a pronounced downturn developed coincident with a 5-cent break in wheat, proportionate declines in other grains and a steady climb by the dollar.

Share trading was of moderate proportions—1,264,405 shares—and selling took the greatest toll among alcohols, metals and a few specialties which had been speculative favorites for several months. Losses of many leaders held in a 1 to 2 point range; some dropped as much as half a dozen points, and several were off 3 or thereabouts.

United States Smelting Sinks.

United States Smelting flopped the better part of 7 points. Allied Chemical, strong just before the holiday, was down 6. Ne wYork Central, United States Industrial Alcohol, Celanese, Industrial Rayon, Cerro de Pasco and American Smelting yielded more than 3. United States Steel, Sears-Roebuck, General Motors, Consolidated Gas, Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Electric, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Du Pont, Kennecott, Montgomery Ward and Chesapeake & Ohio were off 1 to nearly 3. American Telephone was steady until shortly before the close, when it eased nearly a point.

Government bonds were steady to firm and gilt-edge corporate issues followed their example, which could be taken as evidence that the prospective refunding operation had strengthened the market's recent convictions as to the probable nature of Washington's fiscal policies. Europe apparently drew similar deductions, for the dollar's gold value improved to around 69 cents. It was readily recalled, however, that the administration as yet has not made a definite statement of its purposes with respect to the currency.

Carloadings Hold Steady.

Reports on trade included the carloadings figures for last week, off moderately from the preceding week but maintaining their advantage over a year ago when traffic was approaching its 1932 peak. Dun & Bradstreet said the pick-up in general trade movements in the past few days had been "the most impressive" of the autumn season and that the first full week of seasonal weather had brought widespread reports of sharp increases in retail distribution, "particularly pronounced in rural communities."

The Federal Reserve System reported its familar $35,000,000 addition to the Government security portfolio, again refuting the prophets who had forseen more aggressive action in the open market campaign. Currency circulation had another seasonal rise, this time of $21,000,000.

New York City member banks increased "all other" on commercial loans by $40,000,000 and reported a rise of $16,000,000 in holdings of securities other than Governments. Security loans and holdings of Federal paper were both down; the net result of the past week's changes was a rise of $5,000,000 in total loans and investments.

Shanghai's Industrial Trade Is Improving

The industrial development of Shanghai which has taken place in the last few years has created an increased demand for certain foreign products including glass bottles, according to Vice Consul H. V. Cooke, jr., in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

Because of increased cost of imported merchandise resulting from depreciated Chinese currency, the report states, many foreign and Chinese firms, taking advantage of the abundant supply of cheap native labor, have established factories for the production of a large number of items. Some of the more recently established are producing such products as perfumery, confectionery, wines, beer, spirits, ink, cosmetics, bottled waters, chemicals and drugs.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Gasoline—Trade interests report that markets are feeling the beneficial effects of current heavy bulk buying in the midcontinent. It is estimated that leading oil companies have purchased more than 1,000 tank car lots in the last few days.

Lead—Business continues to top that currently being done in most other nonferrous metals. Movement of the metal is fair and inquiries suggest considerable potential demand. Prices are holding firmly at 4.50 cents a pound, New York, and 4.35 cents, East St. Louis.

Canned foods—Prices continue firm despite a considerable reduction in buying interest during the last few weeks. Some small offerings of Southern tomatoes are reported at levels slightly below the list.

Dry goods sales—It is reported in trade quarters that wholesalers' dollar volume is running about 15 per cent ahead of last year's comparative total, part of the gain being attributed to the higher prices now prevailing.

Hardware—Orders in the wholesale market are still on an upward trend, according to trade authorities.

The Conversion and Currency

Does Not Justify Conclusion There Will Not Be Inflation

By Ralph West Robey.

Two points stand out in the discussion of the bond conversion plan for the Liberty 4¼s. The first of these is the courage and wisdom shown by the administration in taking this initial step toward putting the Federal debt in better condition. On this there is little room for a difference of opinion. The second point is the relation of the operation to the monetary policy of the Government, it being held that such a step precludes the possibility of currency inflation. On this there is much room for a difference of opinion.

The desirability of the refunding rests partly upon its making a saving in interest, but more upon getting rid of a part of our short-term debt. At a result of the huge deficits of the last three years, as well as because of the Treasury borrowing policies under Secretary Mellon, this short-term debt has become so large that it is a virtual menace to the satisfactory functioning of our financial system.

This does not mean that the aggregate debt of the Government is dangerously large. On the contrary it still is relatively small as measured by our ability to carry the burden. Too large a proportion of the debt, however, is of short maturity with the result that it is concentrated in the hands of the banks and institutional investors as contrasted with private investors. This is because the low yield and inconvenience of frequent replacements makes short-term issues unattractive to small investors.

To be Significant, Operation Must be First of Series.

Necessarily the current operation alone can do little in meeting this problem. In fact, it scarcely touches the real difficulty, for this rests with short-term, low-yield Treasury notes and certificates, not with Liberty 4¼s. The constructive nature of the plan and the basis for commending it, accordingly, arises from its being a move in the right direction rather than any effect an operation of this size can have in getting a better distribution of the public debt.

Perhaps it has been because of a realization of this fact—the fact that to be of real significance in meeting the debt problem the present conversion must be merely the forerunner of larger ones in the future—that attention has been turned so largely to the possible relation of the plan to our currency policies. If there are to be later and larger conversions, the fiscal affairs of the Government must remain in sound condition and there must not be any issuing of "greenbacks."

From this point of view, therefore, one is justified in drawing the conclusion that the operation must preclude all possibility of currency inflation—that the conservative element in the administration has won a notable victory—that there no longer is any danger that the value of the dollar will be undermined. Such a conclusion is extremely gratifying. Unfortunately, however, the facts of the past six months do not justify it.

Best Conclusion Justified is That Plans Still Undecided.

Rather, the best that one is warranted in concluding about our monetary policy from the plan is that the administration has not decided definitely to issue greenbacks. This much appears justified on the basis that were there a currency issue immediately ahead the Treasury would not take the risk of a conversion at this time.

The moral question, which has been emphasized by many commentators, of whether the Government would sell bonds knowing that they would be paid in depreciated dollars, does not, I believe, deserve any appreciable weight in appraising the significance of the plan. I base this view on, among other things, the repudiation by the Government of its contract to pay its obligations in gold.

The whole question of currency inflation, in other words, and in so far as I can see, is exactly where it was before the bond conversion was announced—and exactly where it has been ever since the Thomas amendment became law. This is that this power will not be used unless conditions at the moment make it seem wise.

Bond Market Advances on Wide Front

Refunding Move Starts Rise in Loans; Sales Up to $13,046,000.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—All classes of domestic bonds responded cheerfully today to the Government's proposal to refund some $2,000,000,000 of the Liberty loan fourth 4¼s on a lower interest basis.

Prime maturities, as well as those of the secondary grades, were in active demand, with gains of 1 to 2 or more points being scattered throughout the list.

Both investors and traders interpreted the administration's conversion plan as a blow at currency inflation, and, consequently, a stimulus to fixed income securities which would have suffered most from drastic dollar depreciation.

Federal Loans Firm.

United States Government loans were fairly active and firm. The uncalled Liberty fourth 4¼s advanced eleven thirty-seconds of a point to 103.22, and the called bonds closed at 101.31 after being up as high as 102.4.

The quotation on the called portion of the issue indicated a premium on the new 4¼-3¼ per cent bonds when trading starts on a "when-issued" basis.

Although some of the more speculative liens were inclined to ease, the majority maintained a steady to firm position. Among the more active railroad gainers were some loans of Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Great Western, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, Michigan Central, N. Y. Central, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and Western Maryland.

Utilities and Industrials.

The better untilities and industrials included bonds of American Metal, American Smelting, American Telephone, Bethlehem Steel, Certain-teed, Inland Steel, International Paper, New Orleans Public Service, North American, Portland General Electric, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Utah Light and Western Union.

French government obligations slumped 2⅞ to 5¼ points and bonds of Dutch East Indies and Switzerland fell 1 to 3 or more as the dollar advanced sharply against currencies of the gold standard countries. Some Japanese and Brazilian loans were heavy. The Australians and Germans were firm.

Sales totaled $13,046,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced half a point.

Foreign Markets.

London, Oct. 13 (A.P.).—Business on the stock exchange was active today on the continued stimulus of trade statistics. Home industrials, especially textile shares, monopolized the majority of attention. Home rails and transatlantic issues were mostly better. The market closed firm.

Paris—Trading on the bourse was very quiet. Traders hesitated because of budgetary uncertainties. Rentes alone improved. The closing, however, was improved.

Berlin—Although trading on the boerse was more quiet, small gains were recorded in some sections of the market. The closing was firmer.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Daily Reserve Credit Rises $26,000,000

Week's Average Advance Is $2,452,000,000; Over '32 Period.

The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended October 11, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks yesterday, was $2,452,000,000, an increase of $26,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $218,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1932.

On October 11 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,477,000,000, an increase of $28,000,000 for the week. This increase corresponds with increases of $44,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $21,000,000 in money in circulation, offset in part by an increase of $32,000,000 in Treasury currency adjusted, and a decrease of $5,000,000 in unexpended capital funds, nonmember deposits, &c.

Bills discounted declined $4,000,000 at all Federal Reserve banks. Holdings of bills bought in open market and of United States bonds shows practically no change for the week, while holdings of United States Treasury notes increased $5,000,000 and of Treasury certificates and bills $30,000,000.

Changes in the amount of Reserve bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended October 11, 1933, were as follows:

Curb's Prices Yield Ground Under Selling

Alcohols and Metals Head Declines; Sales Up to 258,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—The curb market today yielded ground under an active selling fury around the beginning of the last hour. Closing prices disclosed numerous concessions of fractions to 2 points or so.

Alcohols and metals proved most vulnerable. Newmont Mining dropped more than 3 while losses of about 2 were shown in Hiram Walker and New Jersey Zinc. Lake Shore Mines, National Distillers New and Distillers Corporation Seagrams yielded a point or more each.

Utilities were resistant for a time but later eased fractions to a point or so. Electric Bond & Share suffered a setback of 1½. Oils also gave ground grudgingly; excepting Humble, which lost 2, losses were minor. Celluloid and Celanese issues reacted after their recent climb. Aluminum Co. of America lost 3½, Pepperell, Dow Chemical and Axton Fisher were isolated firm spots.

Transfers approximated 258,000 shares compared with 206,000 Wednesday.

New England Area Fish Products Gain

Landings of fishery products at Boston and Gloucester, Mass., and Portland, Me., in the first eight months of the current year amounted to 180,293,469 pounds, valued at $4,336,096, compared with 170,070,585 pounds, valued at $4,112,512, for the corresponding period of 1932, according to the Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries.

This increase in total landings, it is pointed out, was due chiefly to larger catches of cod, haddock, pollock, cusk and flounders.

Plans for New Bonds.

Plans are being made by a number of local banks for subscriptions to the new Treasury bonds which are replacing a large portion of the fourth 4¼ Liberty Loan bonds. The subscriptions open on Monday.

Local bankers expect that most of the called Fourth Liberties will be refunded into the new bonds. Exchange of the Fourth Liberties into the new bonds must be done in the next six months.

The bankers' code will become effective here next Monday. Committees will be appointed by the District of Columbia Bankers Association at this time to draft rules. All classes of banks with the exception of mutual savings banks are placed under the National Recovery Administration by the code. The mutual savings banks have been given the right to present their own code.

Few Changes Expected.

Few changes are expected by the local banks in view of the fact that they have already conformed with the President's blanket code.

Germany Buys More Lumber From America

Imports of American lumber and logs into Germany in the first half of 1933 increased approximately 70 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, according to Vice Consul A. N. Steyne, Hamburg, in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

Total receipts of these United States products by Germany in the 1933 period amounted to 49,700 metric tons, compared with 29,000 tons in the first six months of 1932.

Increased lumber purchases by Germany from the United States, the report states, were influenced by the following factors: Desire of importers and agents to cover their requirements in the expectation of a rising market, low stocks in all varieties of American woods, speculative stock purchases in view of increasing prices in the United States, larger commitments made in January and early February in advance of tariff changes which went into effect on February 15, 1933, and a slight actual improvement in the German demand for American Douglas fir, pitch pine saps and poplar logs.

During the first half of the current year, Germany imported 11,692 metric tons of barrel wood, as compared with 3,154 in the corresponding period of last year. This marked increase, the report points out, was probably the result of orders by American brewers for German beer barrels.

Sears Roebuck Sales Rise to $26,311,738

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Sales of Sears, Roebuck & Co. from September 11 to October 8 showed an 8 per cent gain over last year. The total was $26,311,738, against $24,353,522 in the same period of 1932.

For the nine periods from January 30 to October 8 the sales total was $177,066,524, compared with $187,336,594 a year ago, a decrease of 5.5 per cent.

U. S. Demand For Irish Linen Is Increased

The United States bought a million dollars' worth more of Irish linen in the first eight months of the current year than it did in the same period of 1932, according to a report from the American consulate general, Belfast, made public by the Commerce Department.

Declared exports from the Belfast consular district to the United States, the report shows in the eight-months period of 1933, had a value of $6,048,844, compared with $4,992,013 in the 1932 period. Among the leading items entering into this trade were plain woven linen fabrics, table linen, towels and napkins, and handkerchiefs.

August linen shipments from northern Ireland to the United States were valued at $1,003,090, a marked increase over exports for August, 1932, which stood at $364,163. The exchange situation, the report states, as well as better business conditions in the United States, stimulated the American demand. The tone of the market, it is pointed out, is optimistic as regards autumn trade prospects.

The number of unemployed persons in the linen industry of northern Ireland at the end of August, 1933, was 10,783, as compared with 27,460 unemployed at the same time in 1932.

Bank Rate Unchanged.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank today announced no change in its 2½ per cent rediscount rate.

Canadian Chambers Hear Plea For More United States Trade

Ottawa, Oct. 13 (AP).—A plea for a "businesslike and unbiased look at the proposal" of increased trade between the United States and Canada was made today at the eighth annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce by Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

"Just because a question is difficult," said Mr. Harriman, "is no valid reason for not endeavoring to give an answer to it."

The speaker regarded as "ominous" the declining trade between the two countries and said he wondered if the United States tariff enactments had destroyed trade that would be mutually profitable to both countries, and, similarly, if the Ottawa agreement with the other empire countries had diverted trade into channels "which were not dictated by sound economics."

Mr. Harriman recalled that the United States Government has initiated conversations designed to determine whether there are possibilities for bringing about reciprocal tariff agreements, and added:

"It has always seemed to me that as between two countries such as Canada and the United States, where production costs and other expenses tend to equalize each other, it would be possible to arrive at some formula permitting a reasonable amount of fair competition in both countries of the products of the other.

"In our own existing tariff we have, in our flexible provisions, the policy of equalizing production costs plus transportation. In the Ottawa agreements as between Canada and the United Kingdom you also have indication of a formula that would approach a basis of reasonable competition between British and Canadian goods.

"Would it not be a fair starting point to endeavor to harmonize these points of view in order that * * * we could approximate some formula whereby the rates of duty between the two countries would tend to be only those necessary to assure a reasonable degree of protection to home industry?"

Most of the products in which the United States would be interested in reduced Canadian rates of duty, Mr. Harriman declared, doubtless would be in the manufactured or semimanufactured class.

"This at once raises the question," he continued, "as to whether in the United States, with our efforts to raise the prices of agricultural products under the agricultural adjustment act, our voting farmers would be willing to lend their assent to any reduction in existing duties upon agricultural products. Similarly, in your own country, not only your manufacturers but also the branch plants established there by American manufacturers would doubtless scan critically any effort to reduce rates of duty on behalf of American manufactured articles."

The American said the NIRA "can do much to improve industrial conditions, but restoring purchasing power to the men and women on the farms spelled prosperity for both the country and city."

New Markets May Be Found In Manchuria

When conditions become settled and when the projected road-building plan begins to materialize North Manchuria should offer a good market for automotive products, agricultural machinery and other lines which do not compete with Japanese manufactures, according to Vice Consul T. L. Killiestrom, Harbin, in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

The unfavorable economic conditions existing among Manchurian farmers, the report shows, have served to decrease their demand for products formerly enjoying a large distribution. The demand for kerosene has been noticeably smaller, and there is a tendency in certain villages to revert to the use of bean oil for lighting purposes. Retail stores, which formerly kept stocks of American and European goods, have been forced to stock up with goods of notably inferior quality.

Some revival of the wool and fur business, however, is evident, the report states. Growing conditions for the main crops of North Manchuria, including soy beans, wheat and millet, have been very favorable, and, with the continuation of satisfactory weather, a normal harvest is anticipated.

An extensive highway-construction program has been laid out, but actual road construction up to date has been insignificant. Experiments are being made with modern road-building equipment to determine its value as compared with the cost of road building by manual labor.

U. S. Flour Leading Imports Into Cuba

Imports of American wheat flour into Cuba during the first six months of 1933 amounted to 38,089,000 kilos (428,501 barrels) valued at $1,516,457, and constituted 95.6 per cent of total Cuban imports, according to advices to the Commerce Department from its Havana office.

The 1933 imports of flour from the United States were practically on the same level as during the corresponding period of last year, the report shows, and serve to offset reports current at the beginning of the year that American wheat flour was losing ground to the Canadian product. Imports of Canadian wheat flour in the first six months of the current year amounted to only 2,097,931 kilos (23,603 barrels) valued at approximately $70,000.

Imports of wheat flour into Cuba in the current year have held up much better than imports in general, the report declares.

20 Yearling Calves Awarded First Prize

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 13 (Spl.). A load of 20 baby beeves, less than 14 months old and with an approximate average weight of 1,400 pounds, from the William C. Lantz farm, north of Mount Jackson, won first prize at the annual Baltimore Stock Yards Show.

The beeves were fed by George C. Holtzman, administrator of the Lantz estate and one of the Shenandoah Valley's outstanding farmers and cattle raisers. These beeves were said by local stockmen to be among the best ever seen on the Baltimore market, and a high price was obtained for the carload.

Wheat Slumps 5 Cents Under Selling Drive

Sound Money Indication Blamed in Stop-Loss Rush to Retreat.

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Overbu dened with stop-loss selling fo speculators who had bought at 10 to 15 cents above current quotations wheat collapsed 5 cents a bushe today.

The United States Government bond-refunding program, some trade experts said, indicated a policy of sound money, and this led to hurried retreat of those who had bought on currency inflation prospects.

A different reason given by other grain specialists was that of general lack of confidence on the part of new buyers, and it was added that with a change in public psychology the response of grains would be instantaneous.

Wheat Closes at Bottom.

Wheat closed semidemoralized at the extreme setback which emergency rules permit in any one day, 4⅞ to 5⅛ cents under Wednesday's finish; corn, 2¾ to 3⅛ down; oats, 3 to 3⅛ off and provisions at 5 to 22 cents decline.

Lowest prices since June 19 were reached today in wheat. At no time did the market display any vigorous power to rally. An initial break at the opening amounted to 3 cents, and this was widened to 4 cents about noon, with the maximum limit bumped against just before the close.

Much of the selling came from Eastern sources, and was associated with a sharp downturn of British exchange emphasizing effects of lower wheat quotations at Liverpool as translated into American funds.

Weakness at Liverpool.

Pronounced weakness of the Liverpool wheat market was in some quarters asserted to be more or less due to word that the United States would finance wheat export to China, a circumstance bearish abroad but the opposite here.

Another disturbing factor was announcement that Black Sea Ports had shipped 331,000 bushels of rye to the United States during the past week, and that Russia was exporting 1,120,000 bushels of wheat. Withdrawal of concentrated buying orders upholding the Winnipeg wheat market did a good deal also to tumble Chicago prices down as the day drew to an end.

Corn was relatively steady owing to reports of progress made in a movement to impose an embargo on imports of black strap molasses. It was asserted such an embargo would provide an American market for approximately $75,000,000 bushels of corn. Oats declined the maximum with wheat.

Provisions sagged, influenced chiefly by action of grains.

Post Reviewers Report on the State of Screen and Stage as New Week Opens

Innovation Is Introduced on Screen at Fox

"Power and Glory" Told in New Way—Other Bills Appraised.

"THE POWER AND THE GLORY." Jesse L. Lasky picturization for Fox of a story by Preston Sturges, featuring Spencer Tracy and Colleen Moore, with Ralph Morgan, Helen Vinson, Clifford Jones, Sarah Padden and J. Farrell MacDonald. Directed by William K. Howard. Reviewed from preview.

Stripped to its dramatic essentials, this much-discussed film is just another familiar recital of important events in a triumphant career in big business, brought to naught by the tragic consequences of a domestic debacle which, in the light of calm deliberation, seems to have been something less than inevitable.

It is not upon the sheer fabric of its story, however, that "The Power and the Glory" depends so much as upon the unique manner of its structure and the unconventional way in which the salient episodes are set forth without regard to chronological sequence. The device hit upon by Producer Lasky and his associates has been given the convenient name of "narratage." Narratage, one discovers, is merely an arbitrary designation for an unseen voice which is heard through the action of the picture a good deal of the time, in defense of the character, life and attainments of a man whose funeral comprises the opening incident of the play.

As the memory of Tom Garner is attacked by the bitter and resentful wife of the narrator, the patient voice of Henry expatiates upon some peculiar quality of his old friend's character, or relates some illuminating experience in his life which immediately becomes the basis of the action seen upon the screen. This, then, is narratage—a device that permits a complete indifference to any logical sequence of events and is as apt as not to alternate periods in the youth of the central figures in the story with widely separated incidents in their later lives.

Not Confusing.

Oddly enough, this flitting about indiscriminately from youth to old age and back again, as important happenings in the life of Tom Garner unfold themselves in the reminiscent mind of Henry, in no particular order, does not result in the confusion and dissipation of dramatic forcefulness that one might expect. It does, however, as has been pointed out in these columns on earlier occasions, result from time to time in somewhat the effect of a broadcast with television embellishments.

The recital of events, not unrelated but utterly discontinuous, through the medium of which we are given a comprehensive panorama of the life of a man who elevated himself from the lowly post of illiterate track-walker on a Western railroad right-of-way to a Titan among the industrial and financial powers of the Nation, creates, in the end, a complete portrait. Tom's first impetus to higher and better things was derived from the simple little school teacher who taught him to read and write and whom he promply married. With the sudden surge of success, his indifference to the one who had made all his conquests possible drives her to suicide under the wheels of a downtown conveyance in the heart of a great city.

Another Suicide.

His life with the second Mrs. Tom Garner is doomed by his beautiful young wife's infatuation for his own son. Upon the inadvertent discovery of this mesalliance, Garner himself commits suicide—thus making the final tragic incident of the play the one which actually occured immediately prior to the funeral with which the picture opens. The major and minor joys, sorrows, heartaches, triumphs and tragedies of a lifetime are crowded into the interval between these two mortuary incidents of the biographical drama.

"The Power and the Glory" has been produced with utmost care and directed with intelligence, if not always with impeccable delicacy. It is not a pretty story, but it is an effective one and one to which all of the skill of expert preparation and superior acting has been brought. It marks Spencer Tracy's most complex and pretentious impersonation upon the screen. His Tom Garner is a character study worthy of the fine talents that this excellent young actor possesses. One of the surprises of the year is the finesse displayed by Colleen Moore in the appealingly futile role of the first wife of the magnate. From the irresponsible flapper of "Flaming Youth," Miss Moore has transformed herself into an actress of maturity, poise and some power.

Of the supporting cast, Ralph Morgan is infinitely best, as Henry, the patient soul whose voice fulfills the mission of the unaccustomed narratage. Helen Vinson and Clifford Jones are the young lovers who bring havoc into all their lives by the ardency of their wooing.

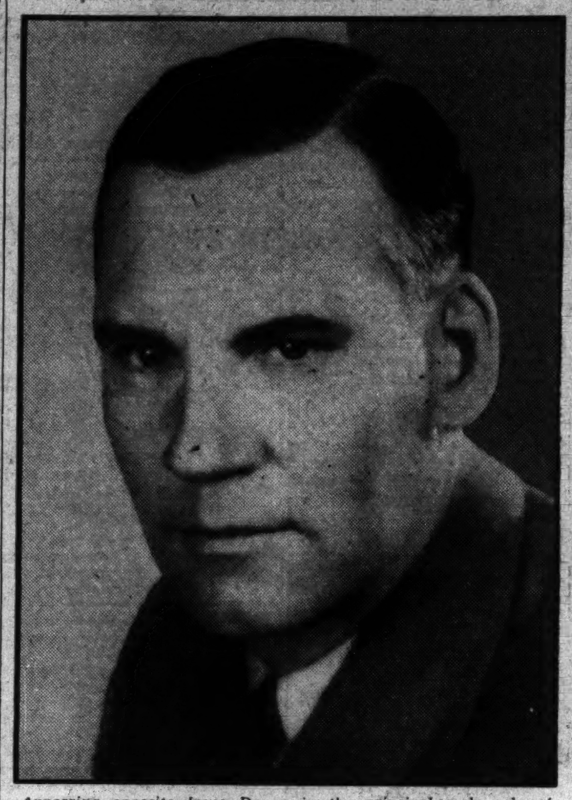
The Stage Bill.

The stage bill this new week is effectually dominated by Jack Sidney and his "Samples of 1933," a miniature revue in which the Stewart Sisters—"Bubbles," Mimi and Honey—harmonists in the Boswell manner, and tiny Anita Ames, whose precocious juvenility one somehow mistrusts, steal the proceedings lock, stock and barrel from Wilbur Hall, whose material is beginning to show the wear and tear of time; Eddie Stewart, who dances a tune out of a piano much as Will Mahoney does out of a "Mahoney-phone," and Birdie Dean, an acrobatic and contortionistic dancer, who ranks near the top.

Other acts of varying degrees of worth are presented by Bill Telaak, assisted by Bill Brown and Sally Payne, who never will be looked upon as prime requisites of this department's happiness; Alf W. Loyal and his not too well-trained canine, "stallions," and Eddie Garr, whose impersonations are always better than his introductory chatter.

Phil Lampkin's elaborate overture, "Echoes of the Bowery," and the Fox Movietone News augment a feature not primarily designed for the frivolous.

On the Screen and in Person



Appearing opposite Irene Dunne in the principal male role of "Ann Vickers," the screen feature of the current bill at RKO-Keith's Theater, and temporarily resident in Washington during the making of his new picture, "Rodney," at Fort Myer, Va., Walter Huston, one of the most reliable of the cinema's contemporary players, may be said to be largely prevalent in the National Capital at the moment. He is a welcome visitor.

"BRIEF MOMENT." Columbia Pictures elimination of the stage play by S. N. Behrman, featuring Carole Lombard and Gene Raymond, with Donald Cook, Monroe Owsley, Teresa Maxwell and Arthur Hohl. Directed by David Burton. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Only the basic idea remains from the stage play by which this picture may be identified as a purported screen version of the S. N. Behrman comedy-drama that was presented a season or two ago in the Belasco Theater with Francine Larrimore and Alexander Woollcott the chief luminaries of a brilliant cast.

In adapting "Brief Moment" to the purposes of the cameras and microphones it is by no means a certainty that the movement of the play, the sharpness of its characterization and its all round worth as sophisticated entertainment have not been appreciably enhanced. It is still the tale of a cabaret singer who marries into a family of great wealth, social prestige and priggishness, with results that are disquieting for all concerned, but considerably amplified and dressed up.

It is, at bottom, the retold story of the eternal war between capital and labor, prodigality and productiveness, leisure and occupational usefulness. As it turns out, Abby Fane, the scorned torch singer from the night club, is the solid quantity in the dramatic equation, her rich young husband, on an allowance of $4,000 per month, the intellectual and social liability. It took several severe lessons to bring this fact home to the dulled sociological consciousness of the Deane family.

Not Action Drama.

There is not any great amount of action in "Brief Moment." It is not a play of physical so much as mental turmoil. There are, however, numerous attempts made by the director to encompass a great deal of suggested action in a minimum film footage by an extravagant utilization of multiple-exposure — the only serious defect in the treatment of a subject which otherwise reflects a high order of excellence in both preparation and execution.

Carole Lombard and Gene Raymond, as the young married couple about whom the complications almost wholly arise, present a picture of blonde incompatibility that is both pictorially and dramatically colorful. Both play with intelligent restraint and an obvious understanding of deportment in their particular stratum of society. Neither, it may be said, rises to any great heights of climacteric power.

The supporting players comport themselves quite in the spirit of opulence in which the picture is conceived. Donald Cook has rather less to do, as the trusted older brother, than Monroe Owsley inherits as a young wastrel, who is consistently the demoralizing influence in the life of the youngest of the Deanes. Both play effectively. Reginald Mason and Teresa Maxwell are parents to both the manor and the manner born.

Unique Dancers.

Lowe, Burnoff and Wensley, dancers who strike a new note in travesty, bring a touch of novelty to the headline position on the vaudeville bill this week. This trio—two men and a girl—have contrived to lend a richly comic note to most of what they do in the way of adagio dancing, if dancing is what adagio work is. Opening their turn with a demonstration of the grace and intricacy of legitimate ballroom dancing, they slip almost imperceptibly into a highly amusing routine of burlesque terpsichorean maneuvers that end in a riot of comedy. The act is pursued on a crescendo of speed and humorous effect.

The stage bill is opened by the Chung Yee Wah troupe of eight Chinese jugglers and gymnasts, who offer one of the finest exhibitions of its kind ever seen on a Washington stage. Some of their feats are almost unbelievable. They are followed by Nate Busby & Co., in "Christmas Eve in the Big House," their familiar musico-comedy skit in the cell block of a jail, and Gracie Barrie, in next to her last week as mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, who sings three more songs of fine selection in her inimitable way. Her numbers are juvenile role of Swipes, it is regretfully reported, except in his crying scenes, is becoming a self-conscious adolescent with his mind evidently intent upon the need of "acting." His incessant pouting and the unaccustomed plaintiveness of even his liveliest moments are laid on just a bit thick and are excessively irritating to one who remembers when Jackie was the grandest little actor of them all.

Fay Wray is demure and appealing on the receiving end of Mr. Raft's punches, but Pert Kelton dissipates a great deal of the favorable impression she made in "Bed of Roses" by making a practically complete mess of the role of the can-can dancer who leads the chorus of Amazons in the beer garden burleycue shows.

Despite the self-sufficiency of "The Bowery" as a diversified and ample entertainment, the surrounding bill has not been slighted.

Foremost among the auxiliaries is "Three Little Pigs," the Walt Disney Silly Symphony that has become a classic with its theme song of "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?" Ted Healy and all his stooges appear in a natural-color revue, "Hello, Pop," that seems to stand in dire need of terminal facilities, and the Metrotone News rounds out a bill that will probably have them hanging from the chandeliers throughout the week.

Columbia

"SING, SINNER, SING"—Majestic picturization of a play by Wilson Collison, featuring Paul Lukas, Leila Hyams, Donald Dillaway and Ruth Donnelly. Directed by Howard Christy. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

This time the Gambling Ship weighs anchor and sails forth with the Torch Singer—variations on a theme, one might say, and the variations depicted by Paul Lukas, Leila Hyams and Donald Dillaway in the pivotal roles are sufficiently diverse to render the original theme scarcely visible.

Too, with the aid of such players as George E. Stone, Joyce Compton and Ruth Donnelly, there is little time to lapse into any great similarity to the earlier stories compounded of similar ingredients.

Briefly, the story concerns the proprietor of a cabaret and his affair with his torch singer who subsequently marries a perennially inebriated scion of the rich. Finally the husband decides to shoot himself and the torch singer is convicted for his murder. But the gambler steps into the breach, paying with his own life for a self-inflicted death.

It does not sound reasonable, but that's the story—with Paul Lukas as the gambler, Leila Hyams as the singer, and Donald Dillaway as the husband.

Among those of the supporting cast who should be singled out for commendable work are George E. Stone, as Mr. Lukas' right-hand man (another of Mr. Stone's flawless portrayals); Ruth Donnelly, as Miss Hyams' girl friend (strikingly reminiscent of Winnie Lightner), and Joyce Compton, the come-on girl for Mr. Lukas' temple of chance.

Notwithstanding the apparent lack of inspiration in any department of "Sing, Sinner, Sing," it is an entertaining bit of celluloid, which, when supplemented by the present array of auxiliary attractions, makes up an entirely "value received" program.

The secondary features are headed by another of Fanny Zilch's cartoon adventures, "Fanny's Wedding Day." This series, while lacking some of the refinements (?) of this branch of the cinematic art, is a grand parody of the old-time serial melodrama, and surely should appeal to all ages.

Other short subjects include Andy Clyde, in "His Weak Moment," and a release of the Paramount sound news.

Metropolitan

"TOO MUCH HARMONY." Paramount picturization of a story by Henry L. Mankiewicz, with songs by Arthur Johnson and Sam Coslow, starring Bing Crosby supported by Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Judith Allen, an Lilyan Tashman. Directed by Edward Sutherland. Reviewed, third week, Friday afternoon.

Apparently Washington's cinema and croonera fans can't get too much of "Too Much Harmony," so this mild but nice little musical picture of backstage life and strife goes into its third week.

And as it does, we find:

Bing Crosby still smiling ingratiatingly and singing so very elegantly indeed that an Oliver-Twistish "more" is in order;

Jack Oakie still convulsing with his entirely original and authentic north - of - the - Mason and-Dixon-line Virginia dialect;

Lil Tashman and Judith Allen as the feminine interests, Lil being more fierce and fickle than feminine and Judith more frailly feminine than she should be;

Skeets Gallagher, Harry Green and Kitty Kelly helping things along;

"Boo, Boo, Boo," "Thanks" and "The Day You Came Along," tuneful and full of whistling possibilities; "Boo, Boo, Boo" restoring our faith in lyrics, because its own admit they're insane.

And the usual subsidiaries to complete a popular bill.

"THE BOWERY." Twentieth Century's picturization for United Artists of a story by Michael L. Simmons and Bessie R. Solomon, adapted to the screen by Howard Estabrook and Jimmie Gleason, featuring Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper and George Raft, with Fay Wray, Pert Kelton, George Walsh and Tammany Young. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Reviewed Thursday midnight.

To live up to its name in any measure whatsoever, this film necessarily would have to be a lusty, rowdy, melodramatic comedy, reflecting all of the droll iniquities of the "livest mile of street in the world" in an era when the "gay white way" was gaslit, feminine charms were concealed beneath whole bolts of ruffled fabrics and juvenile ebullience took the form of tossing rocks through Chinese laundry windows and locking inoffensive young women in stuffy closets as an outlet for the impulses of youthful and jealous tyranny. "The Bowery," it should be said without quibble, lives up to its name.

Cut from the "What Price Glory" pattern, with Chuck Connors, the Mayor of Chinatown and owner of the biggest bar on the fabulous lower New York thoroughfare, and Steve Brodie, his bitterest rival and dearest friend, cast as the Capt. Flagg and Sergt. Quirt of the mid-Victorian period with which the story deals, "The Bowery" unreels a fast-moving, raucous and hell-bent-for-murder yarn that ends satisfactorily at least three or four times before it finally stops and alternates rough-and-ready comedy with a sort of rough-diamond heart interest that somehow manages to generate a terrific pressure of audience interest.

Dates Mixed.

Anachronisms are as thick in "The Bowery" as cats in the hallway of Chuck Connors' dingy walkup flat. While the crowds are singing songs that flourished in the late Nineties, John L. Sullivan is introduced as a masked unknown being given a barroom tryout under the protective eye of Brodie, whereas John L. had reached his prime, started down the other side and been knocked out by Jim Corbett in 1892. But these things do not matter. This picture was made for entertainment and not to serve as an authentic textbook on the chronology of the mauve decade.

While an enormous number of people seem to be engaged in the daily life of the Bowery, not more than half a dozen characters are vital to the development of a story that embraces everything from barkeeping and fisticuffing to firefighting and rioting and Carrie Nation's saloon-smashing to Mr. Brodie's alleged leap from the Brooklyn Bridge. There is even "girl interest" in the rivalry between Mr. Connors and Mr. Brodie for the favor of Lucy, the lily from Albany, and the ribald wooing of the honky-tonk girls by every lad on the block.

In short, a high-power, profane and extremely interesting and amusing exaggeration of everything that probably went on on "The Bowery" is here unfolded for the bewilderment of those moderns who have become deluded into the belief that nothing ever happened before the Great War! Oh, Yeah?

The Three Leads.

Wallace Beery, as Chuck Connors, replays all the parts in which he has scored hits from "The Big House" down through "The Champ," "Min and Bill," and "Tugboat Annie" to the present, with a little New Yorkese added to his vocabulary for good measure and convincing "atmosphere." George Raft runs him a close second, if not, in fact, a dead heat, in the slightly more colorful role of Steve Brodie, the young dandy with the nerve of a lion and the craftiness of a cat. Jackie Cooper, in the "Buckin' the Wind," from "Too Much Harmony;" "This Time It's Love" and "Ain'tcha Glad?" Lewis and Ames return with their 7-foot, 5-inch stooge, and score their usual hit.

The screen supplementaries include a Vitaphone musical tabloid in Technicolor, "'Tis Spring," with a cast of stars led by Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Frank Albertson, Ruth Donnelly and numerous others, and the newsreel.

Freddie Clark's "Footlight Parade" overture completes a program in which the screen has a trifle the better of the scoring.

Lehman Hit By Seabury In N. Y. Race

Attack on State Official Draws Heated Reply From McKee.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP). — Into the mayoralty campaign was thrust today the name of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman—attacked by Samuel Seabury, fusion strategist, and defended by Joseph V. McKee, independent Democratic candidate.

Seabury, prosecutor of the legislative investigation which ended in the resignation of Mayor James J. Walker, charged Gov. Lehman had failed to correct evils disclosed by the inquiry and had neglected to take steps to bring to justice criminals who stole emergency relief funds.

McKee replied:

"Judge Seabury is not a candidate, but let me say this: His attack on Gov. Lehman is the key to the man's character and what he is trying to do in this campaign.

"The people of this city will resent any attack on a man who is one of the greatest governors of this State."

It was the first time that Seabury, directing Fiorello M. La Guardia's strategy, had criticised the administration.

Seabury, independent Democrat, in attacking Lehman struck at another personal friend of President Roosevelt. Previously he had denounced Postmaster General James A. Farley and Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn, Bronx supporter of McKee.

While Seabury and McKee were exchanging charges, Tammany Hall continued reprisals against party leaders who have switched to McKee.

Kenneth F. Sutherland, leader of the Brooklyn revolt for McKee, was dismissed from his $9,140 job as assistant to the aldermanic president.

Former Senator Abraham Kaplan, O'Brien campaign manager, minimized reports of continued revolt to McKee.

Austin, Tex., Oct. 13 (AP).—Lawrence Westbrook, director of the State rehabilitation and relief commission, announced today 100 Americans stranded in Tampico, Mexico, as a result of the recent hurricane would be transported to their homes by Mexican and Texas agencies.

Westbrook said the Americans would be moved to Laredo at expense of the Mexican government. At Laredo they will be cared for by Texas relief authorities.

Chicago Fan Dancer Draws Fine of $25

Chicago, Oct. 13. (AP).—Open season on fan dancers was continued today. Rosita Carmen, 22, an exponent of the dance made famous by Sally Rand, was fined $25 in woman's court.

"The place to study art," said Judge Erwin Halsted, waving aside defense pleas, "is in the art schools, not in the night clubs."

Famous British Train Kills Man in Kentucky

Owensboro, Ky., Oct. 13 (AP).—Charles Lee Mitchell, 22, Henderson County, was killed tonight by the "Royal Scot," crack British train, at Reed, 5 miles west of here.

The accident was witnessed by 50 persons who gathered to see the famous train, which had been exhibited at the Chicago Fair.

Gov. Ferguson Signs Kidnaping Death Bill

Austin, Tex., Oct. 13 (AP).—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson tonight signed a bill making kidnaping a capital offense in Texas, punishable by death.

Heretofore the law in this State has held that where a victim was returned unharmed, the death penalty could not be inflicted.

Clay in Montana Top Soil Found Rich With Gold

Red Lodge, Mont., Oct. 13 (AP). Gold-bearing clay, producing $200 to $300 per ton, is being scraped from the top of the ground in the New World mining district, reports and assay tests at Helena showed today.

The area, newly opened by a highway, is shipping residual silt and clay to East Helena smelters, where it assayed from $70 to $1,000 a ton.

Friday, 13th, Distributes Luck and Woe Impartially

Hunch Followers at Track Play Show Horse, Drop Money.

In case you haven't anything to remember it by, yesterday was Friday the 13th.

To begin with, it started to rain early in the morning. And to make matters worse, it continued until late afternoon. You were lucky if you had a raincoat. If you didn't, chalk it up to Friday the 13th.

Hunch players at the Laurel race track lost everything, including their tempers. There were 13 horses in the steeplechase event. A jockey of the Greentree Stables wore No. 13. Money went on his nose—and the horse ran third.

Sixteen-year-old Mary Smith, daughter of Policeman Samuel Smith, of the First Precinct, found her father's service revolver. It was discharged. Mary is in Garfield Hospital.

But all in all it was a lucky day for Mrs. Elsie Jarves, of 2836 McGill terrace northwest. She went to the Ambassador Theater. Upon leaving she discovered the loss of a pearl necklace, valued at $8,000. She reported to police. The necklace was found.

A fireman fighting the Dickey Bros. warehouse fire didn't have a chance to go into action. He sprained his ankle stepping from a truck—the last to arrive.

Gold Braid

Howe Kept From Enjoying Colonel's Life.

Gold braid is keeping Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to the President, from living up to his title as a Kentucky colonel.

Col. Howe replied yesterday to an invitation from James C. McFarland, Cincinnati, to attend the Kentucky-Cincinnati football game in the Ohio city today as "dean of Kentucky colonels." He wrote:

"As I have looked into the matter of the correct uniforms for Kentucky colonels and find that several hundred dollars' worth of gold braid is required, aside from the rest of the regalia, I frankly doubt my ability to live up to my title during the present depression."

Col. Howe also said a deluge of work would prevent his attending the game.

Clergymen Attend Concert Tomorrow

30 Here Accept Invitation of Dr. Kindler.

Invited by Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, more than 30 Washington clergymen will attend the opening concert of the National Symphony Orchestra tomorrow afternoon at Constitution Hall as guests of the orchestra.

In his invitation to the ministers, Dr. Kindler said "the work of the churches and my work have very much in common."

"The purpose of these concerts," he added, "is not thought of in terms of financial gain or return, but rather to offer the people something that shall stand for the finer appreciations and cultural values of life. We share this common task."

Among the ministers expected to attend today's concert are the Revs. William Pierpont, McKendree Methodist Episcopal Church; John E. Briggs, Fifth Baptist Church; Henry W. Tolson, Westminster Presbyterian; Edward Gabler, Christ Church; Kenneth B. Carson, Garden Memorial Presbyterian; Edward G. Goetz, Zion Evangelical Lutheran; H. W. O. Byers, adjutant and welfare commissioner of the Michigan Department of the American Legion, were introduced today in his conspiracy trial before Federal Judge John Knight and a jury.

Byers is indicted with George S. Krieger, New York merchant, on charges of conspiring to obtain Government supplies set aside for distribution to the poor and selling them at a profit.

Archbishop Gives Arms Parley Plea

London, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Archbishop of Canterbury in a speech tonight at a League of Nations demonstration said issues before the disarmament conference may be summarized as those of "peace or war."

Success would bring new security, he declared, but failure would mean "the specter of war would once again haunt the peoples of the world."

Referring to Germany, he said "it is idle to deny that a new source of fear" has been opened.

Prison Holds Lure As Felon Seeks Job

Boston, Oct. 13 (AP).—Because a lifetime of hard work had unfitted him for idleness, Pasquale Cetrone, 44, at his own request today was transferred to State Prison, where he can have something to do.

Cetrone was sentenced October 3 to 12 to 14 years as an accessory before the fact in an assault with intent to murder John Finelli, Newton attorney.

Labor Cheers Senator Davis In Convention

Rousing Reception Given "Puddler Jim" After Lottery Acquittal.

Senator James J. Davis may have shed tears when a jury found him not guilty of lottery charges Thursday, but he was all smiles, the beaming, hand-shaking "Puddler Jim" of old, as he walked into a rousing reception by the American Federation of Labor yesterday afternoon.

Grinning broadly as labor leaders congratulated him, the former Secretary of Labor alluded to his recent predicament in terms of the story of Daniel in the lions' den, intimating that, like Daniel, he "knew he was right and was unafraid."

"Labor leaders always have plenty of visits from Old Lady Trouble," Senator Davis commented. "Sometimes they come in the form of lockouts; sometimes as injunctions. And when all other means fail, she smacks you with an indictment."

Addressing the convention, which adjourned its regular business to extend him an ovation, Senator Davis announced his support of President Roosevelt's recovery program, and in the next breath voiced strenuous opposition to the administration's policy of restricted production.

"There is no jurisdiction for destruction of any part of production," he said. "We should use our unwanted surpluses to increase the purchasing power, not only of our own people, but of the rest of the world.

"I advocate that our people, and all people, be given plenty to eat so they may be fired with ambition. Then we shall see those whom we call poor reach out to earn money for the increase of purchasing power."

Senator Davis urged, however, that labor submerge its differences to stand by the President and the NRA. The recovery act, he declared, "is not an effort to put Government into business; it is an effort to put some honest business principles into industry."

Slot Machine Owner Fined.

Romney, W. Va., Oct. 13 (Spl.).—Roland Lammert was fined $25 and costs in a justice's court here for operating a slot machine. The machine was confiscated.

New Navy Order Retains Lakehurst

Air Station Remains Open On Restricted Basis.

Revoking an order issued May 10, the Navy Department published regulations yesterday for the continuance of operations of the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., on a restricted basis.

Since the loss of the airship Akron and the transfer of the new dirigible Macon to the new airship base at Sunnyside, Calif., Navy officials have repeatedly stated that the Lakehurst station would be abandoned.

Close observers here were surprised yesterday at the announcement that training activities there would be continued. They saw an indication that the Navy intends to continue its airship program and will have a crew of officers trained in lighter-than-air navigation in hopes that the next session of Congress will replace the Akron.

First Lady Urges Spiritual Revival

Mrs. Roosevelt Tells Need in Baltimore Speech.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 13 (Spl.).—"There is little hope for permanent economic change unless we have a great spiritual revival," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told the Presbyterian Union of Maryland at a dinner here tonight.

"We are awakening to the knowledge," continued Mrs. Roosevelt, "that things have existed in our country that should not exist where people claim to be religious.

"And only as people reawaken to the real desire to live what religion teaches will we be able to make a different world."

Mrs. Roosevelt was introduced by the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, D. D., pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church in Washington.

Rites Honor R. E. Lee.

Lexington, Va., Oct. 13 (Spl.).—A short memorial service, commemorating the death of Gen. Robert E. Lee, who died October 12, 1870, was held in Lee Chapel yesterday.

10,000 Watch Underrated Clemson Eleven Hold G. W. to 0-0 Tie

Navy, Pitt Top East's Card, Resuming Relations After 17 Years

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

SITTING in the pressbox at Griffith Stadium last night watching the George Washington football team being smeared with a scoreless tie by Clemson when I was hit hard by a thought. This night life on the gridiron was somebody's bright idea.

After the opening kick-off is wafted down the field, the only telltale feature of the night game is that white-coated ghost ball. Spectators become immersed in the action, they forget the hour, and you have a ball game differing in no respect from a battle played by sunlight.

Ten thousand fans out there last night attest to the popularity of the nocturnal sport. The hour apparently is more suited to their convenience and to the athletic exchequers of the competing institutions. The same game played by daylight would not have attracted those 10,000. At best, it figured to be only an early-season attraction.

Success for Espey.

For George Washington U., held to a scoreless tie by a team that it figured to beat, the game was a competitive failure, but to Jonathan K. Espey, public relations counsel, it was an artistic and historical success.

Espey, the best-dressed as well as the most-dressed reformed sports writer south of U street, is giving Washington fans a show along with its football. The parade before the game, the bands, the fireworks, the show between the half, represented the handiwork of Espey, who knows the public likes all the trimmings with its football.

He sits in the press box quite carried away with himself as the pageantry unfolds itself on the field. "That's big league stuff," he confides to his neighbors. "Those fireworks cost us $150, aren't they grand?" That Clemson drill team on the field is the Southern R. O. T. C. champion, no less, ha'll have you know.

Goes Into Action.

Espey goes into action with the G. W. team on the opening kick-off. His neighbors in the press box are pushed steadily toward the goal line as Espey advances with the play. He operates on a slightly smaller scale than the G. W. team, advancing himself down the row of benches only a foot for every 5 yards the team gains, using elbows and body English.

The announcer on the field carries no weight with Espey. If it is a 10-yard gain that is broadcast, and Espey believes it to be 12 yards, the press box is loudly informed that it was 12 yards. If G. W. is pushed back to the 2-yard line, Espey will tell you it is the 3-yard line.

"Clemson gains 5 yards through left guard," the amplifiers tell you. Now that is Zuzu Stewart's position. And Espey is charged with ballyhooing Stewart into all-Americanism. "Clemson gains 5 yards through center," Espey shouts. He forgot to let the announcer in on the matter of Stewart's all-Americanism.

Show Begins With Parade.

Espey's show for the fans began with the parade of Clemson's Cadet Corps of 650, marching with the Clemson band, resplendent in blue uniforms and a drum major with plumed headdress and knee breeches, who, all in all, made the professional costumers as envious as a mongrel at the Westchester Kennel Show.

At the end of the first quarter, a bomb exploded high in air, diffusing a brilliant American flag in colors that was illuminated by parachutes bearing arc lights, a triumph of the fireworks art.

Between the halves the Clemson drill team, the R. O. T. C. champion of the South, swung through difficult maneuvers up and down the gridiron in an exhibition that made the football teams look bad in comparison.

Temple Defeats Haskell, 31 to 0

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Temple University defeated the Haskell Indians tonight, 31 to 0, before 20,000 fans.

The proteges of Glenn S. (Pop) Warner scored two touchdowns in the first quarter, another in the third period and two more in the last quarter.

The Indians were unable to get their swift back field men loose, and their weight prevented them from making gains through the line.

The victory marked the second for Temple this season, against one defeat when Carnegie Tech trounced them last week.

Drake Ekes Out Win Over Creighton, 6 to 0

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 13 (A.P.).—Converting its lone scoring opportunity, the Drake University eleven eked out a 6-to-0 victory over a jinx-ridden Creighton team in a Missouri Valley Conference battle tonight.

Middie Team Is Underdog In Battle

Only Two Regulars of 1932 Missing From Each Eleven.

Georgia-N. C., Auburn-Tech and Tennessee-Duke in Limelight.

HEADLINING today's football program in the East is the clash of Pitt and Navy at Pittsburgh, the first head-on collision of two major Eastern terms.

Seventeen years to the day, after their last meeting on the gridiron, Pitt and Navy meet again, with the Panthers ruling the favorite.

Veteran teams will go into battle with only two regulars of last year's squad missing from each line-up. But in contrast to Pitt's splendid record of 1932, when the Panthers lost only the Tournament of Roses game, is Navy's mediocre campaign of last year, when the Middies lost to William and Mary, Ohio U., Penn, Columbia, Notre Dame and Army.

Chief of Pitt's threats are Mike Sebastian, hard-plunging back, and Skladany, all-American end, adept at receiving forward passes. Gordon Chung-Hoon, the Hawaiian half back, who runs, kicks and passes, bears Navy's offensive hopes.

Plenty of Significance.

New York, Oct. 13 (A.P.).—The crash of the big fellows coming to grips, particularly in the Midwest, the Far West, and the South, rises over the football lands tomorrow. It's still a bit early for traditional rivalries to appear on the scene, but the brilliance of the intersectional card, converging on the Midwest, adds in color to a day that still packs plenty of championship significance.

Topping the program in the Midwest are three games which will prove a fair test for the six teams involved.

At Columbus, Vanderbilt moves north to meet a strong Ohio State eleven which last week snowed under Virginia, 75-0. At Chicago, Stanford's Cardinals invade the lair of Northwestern for a struggle which may result in Northwestern hitting the comeback trail after being defeated by Iowa earlier in the season. At Ann Arbor, Michigan and Cornell resume gridiron relations after a 16-year lapse.

Six Contests.

Nebraska and Iowa State and Missouri and the Kansas Aggies lock in the first of the Big Six title matches.

While the Eastern spotlight shines on the invasion of Pittsburgh by Navy's rising might, the husky Trojans of Southern California, national champions by acclamation last season and with strength undiminished, take over the West stage for the day in battle with St. Mary's, beaten by California last Saturday by a single point. The Olympic Club provides California's opposition, while in the Northwest, Oregon and Washington meet in their annual thriller.

Out For Revenge.

Syracuse, a fine looking eleven, seeks revenge against Ohio Wesleyan for last year's 19 to 12 licking, while Delaware absorbs some of Army's lightning, Marquette takes on Mississippi, and Jim Crowley's rampant Rams at Fordham try butting the strong West Virginia outfit. Oklahoma reaches out of Bix Six territory for a shot at Texas.

Laurel Fans to See Winooka in Workout

Race horse fans at nearby Laurel will be given the opportunity today of witnessing the fast sprinter, Winooka, reputed Australian champion, who will stage a public workout.

Race Secretary Jack Campbell is arranging a test for swift runners for next Friday, and such speedy horses as Indian Runner, Pairby-pair and Gold Step are being sought for the event.

Central and Eastern To Clash on Monday

The Eastern-Central game will be played Monday, according to an announcement by John Paul Collins, president of the Interhigh Athletic Association, after a hurried meeting late yesterday afternoon. Officials of the two schools had hoped to play the game today, but owing to the soggy condition of the field, the battle was postponed.

Maryland Has Do-or-Die Spirit

NEW ORIEANS, Oct. 13 (Spl.). Up against overwhelming odds in one of the most important games they will play this season, Maryland's football warriors were prepared to make a do-or-die stand against the Green Wave of Tulane when the teams clash here tomorrow afternoon. The intersectional tilt has attracted a large crowd of football fans to the Crescent City, despite the fact that Maryland reputedly has one of the greenest teams in recent years.

The visitors arrived in this city tonight. A brief limbering up workout is scheduled in the morning. It will consist of nothing more than calisthenics and kicking the ball.

Tulane Still Power.

Although weakened by the loss of players through graduation, Tulane still ranks with the powers that be in Southern football and is admittedly a couple of touchdowns better than its rival. Tulane will take the field with the odds possibly as high as 5-1 in its favor.

Maryland will start a line-up dominated by sophomores. The

G. U. Underdog In Game With Manhattan

GEORGETOWN will not lack moral support when it engages Manhattan in Brooklyn this afternoon. A special train bearing 500 Hoya students and a 50-piece band will leave this morning for the scene of battle. The team is already in Gotham, having left yesterday afternoon.

Although several of its best players will be in the game for only a brief time because of injuries, the Hilltoppers are optimistic about stopping the Jaspers.

On a basis of past performances Manhattan rates a slight favorite.

Capt. Fred Callahan, giant center, will do the punting for Georgetown in place of Mack Stanley, who was injured in the Canisius fray and will be unable to play. It will be the first time since Georgetown defeated New York University, 7 to 3, in an upset in 1929 that a lineman has kicked for the Hoyas against a New York team.

Team Greatly Improved.

A few seasons ago Manhattan's football clubs could not be rated in the same class with those of the Washington school. But in the intervening years Chick Meehan has gone to the New York school, taking with him big-time football, while Georgetown's fortunes have sadly declined.

Manhattan is well prepared for anything the visitors may spring. Andy Dern and "Tip" Kaye, ends, did particularly well against Georgetown plays in practice dur-

Colonials, Checked On Two-Yard Line, Near Defeat Later

Tigers Outplay G. W. in Second Half and Reach Two-Yard Mark.

Leemans Is Halted in First Quarter After Long Gains.

OUTGAMED in the first half and outplayed in the second, George Washington University's heavily backed football team was held to a scoreless tie by a fast and well-drilled Clemson eleven last night at Griffith Stadium. It was recorded as a moral victory for the visitors, who entered the fray expecting defeat and hoping to hold its rival to a low score.

But the 10,000 stunned spectators who came to see the downtown school ride triumphantly to its third consecutive victory were rudely jolted by the bitter and brilliant defense of the lightly regarded underdogs. Three times Clemson's yellow-jerseyed stalwarts were shoved within the shadows of defeat, and three times they clawed their way back to midfield safety.

Clemson on Defense.

Play was in Clemson territory entirely in the first half and a large part of the third period. Almost immediately after the opening kick-off Clemson's players found themselves battling with their backs to the goal line, Ben Plotnicki engineering the attack that penetrated the visitors' forward wall.

Down to Clemson's 2-yard line with a crunching drive marched the Colonials. "Tuffy" Leemans bore the brunt of the burden, with an occasional lift from "Blackmare" Davenport and Finis Parrish. But with a touchdown seemingly inevitable, the Southerners braced, took the ball on downs and punted out of danger.

George Washington outplayed its guests by a wide margin in the first half, piling up eight first downs to Clemson's two, but the last half told an entirely different story.

After satisfying itself with a safe, kicking game in the first half, Clemson opened up with a varied assortment of forward and lateral passes and reverse plays that sent its backs spinning out into the open and down the field for gains ranging from 8 to 19 yards.

The Tigers inaugurated a drive late in the third period that carried over into the final quarter and down to G. W.'s 2-yard line before it was stopped.

Hinson Gets Away.

A 19-yard ride off tackle by Gene Hinson, followed by a double-lateral pass, Hinson to Kissam to Willimon, and a forward pass, Hinson to McGowan, good for another 19 yards, featured the attack.

Three stabs at the line were futile as the Colonials' bristling defense piled up the ball carriers.

C. U. Awaits St. John's Invasion

McVean, District Boy, to Start Game at Quarter Back.

A LIMPING, badly battered Catholic University Football Team today returns to home soil against an ambitious up-and-coming opponent. Still suffering from their trouncing at the hands of Holy Cross last week-end, the Cardinals will send into battle a reserve line-up when St. John's College, of Annapolis, is battled at Brookland bowl at 2:30 o'clock.

Geared up for what is regarded as their most important game, the "Johnnies," according to "Dutch" Bergman, C. U.'s head coach, are in a prime position to sneak over an upset.

"I'm using my reserve because I've got to," Bergman remarked yesterday. "My regulars were too badly bruised last week to start them this week."

Finn, McVean in Tests.

Today's game will be intriguing inasmuch as it will furnish a definite line on two former C. U. end-or-cover men, half backs Tommy Finn and Bob McVean. Ballyhooed as unsung heroes since the season's beginning, the two finally will receive their initial starting chances under varsity fire.

Young McVean, side-lined for two years due to the unusual caliber of C. U.'s backs, came to life against LaSalle in his eleven's 1933 inaugural, slicing off three touchdowns through the combined medium of expert pass snaring and brainy and brilliant stepping.

Five Washington Boys.

An added incentive for victory will be provided St. John's inasmuch as five Washington boys and former District public high school standouts will be included among its starting players. Carl MacCartee, Austin Winston and Norman Stevens, former Techites, and An-

Anarchy, Outsider at 4 to 1, Scores by Nose in Juvenile Feature at Laurel

Hindu Queen Closes Fast; Is Beaten

ANARCHY romped home in the mud at Laurel yesterday and the favorite players yelled "Murder!" when Collateral, an odds-on choice, ran out of the money. Instead of the runaway victory of Collateral that the majority of turf fans had painted in their mind-picture of the feature, Anarchy had to fight to defeat Hindu Queen. As has often happened in history, Anarchy triumphed over Royalty.

So thorough was the beating administered to the favorite that the C. V. Whitney representative had to be wound to the breaking point to wiggle into third position. This was no help to his backers, however, as show mutuels on the small field were not on sale.

Laurel's first really bad racing weather kept the crowd down to some 5,000, but it put plenty of pep into the coffee and hot-dog business and brightened the eyes of the long-shot stabbers.

Sets Swift Pace.

The feature, for some reason named the Manor, was over the mile course for 2-year-olds, and scratches left a foursome in the contest. Aside from the fact that Collateral and Skimalong changed places in the stretch, the order of the finish was the same as positions at the first turn.

Anachary set a swift pace under the conditions and had a three-length advantage over Hindu Queen at one stage. The latter moved up on the far turn and changed a rout into a contest during the last quarter. However, Jockey Bellizzi shook just enough speed out of his tiring mount to take the purse by a nose.

Tullihoo, slick daughter of the mud-running Polymelian, skidded to an easy victory in the opening race for the maiden 2-year-old fillies. May McDonough was second, after setting the pace virtually from the start. Bright Tess drove into the show money. An even dozen competed at six furlongs and the winner was the favorite at a $4.60 mutuel.

Thevallion, stablemate of Winnooka, ran third in the second race under the handling of the Australian jockey, Edgar Britt, but the bracke's went to Ladino. The son of Ladkin, noted for his mud ability, was backed below even money and romped to the finish line. Tela came up to take the third position. Trevallion set most of the pace. Ladino paid $3.40.

Shylock Pays $19.

It looked as though the hunch players were going to cash a bet on Beret, No. 13 post position in the field of 13 that faced the barrier on Friday, the 13th. In fact, Beret appeared the winner going over the last jump. However, Shylock and George Jessel came with a burst of closing speed that sent the hunch horse back to third position. Bolero did the majority of the front running until the real moves began on the final swing for home. No falls marred the race, although two in the field pulled up. Shylock, an old favorite, was overlooked in the betting and paid a $19 mutuel.

Jockey Henry Cruz gave One Chance a million-dollar ride to win the fourth race from some fair sprinters. The Chance Play colt was up in the closing strides to take the measure of Hernando and Ilchester. One Chance was supposed to be opposed to muddy tracks and rewarded his backers at a rate of $20.20.

Hillsborough Winner.

Hillsborough was the horse to catch in the sixth race. He was not caught. Pencader and Little Stokes did some tall trying, but in vain. In the seventh the result board showed Nos. 1, 2 and 3, with Parity, Barry and Resisting finishing in that order.

In the finale Garlic was never out of a pull in the mile-and-one-half race. Zembla was second and Do Tell third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

William Penn, born 289 years ago today, October 14, 1644, who was the founder of Pennsylvania, was not the man for whom the State was named. The State was named for his father, Sir William Penn, from whom the Quaker William Penn inherited an $80,000 debt against the King of England. In exchange for this debt he was given the land that later became Pennsylvania. "Sylvania" is from the Neo-Latin, meaning "woodland."

Strange as it seems, Penn did not want the country named Pennsylvania. He tried vainly to have it called New Wales. In a letter to his friend, Robert Turner, he explained the naming of the country as follows:

"This day my country was confirmed to me under the great seal of England, with large powers and privileges, by the name of Pennsylvania; a name the king would give it in honor of my father. I chose New Wales, being, as this, a pretty hilly country. Penn adds that when they decided to call his land Pennsylvania he opposed it, adding, "nor could 20 guineas move the undersecretary to vary the name."

Salton Sea, a lake in California, has fresh water in one end and salt water in the other. The fresh water area is in the south end, where irrigation waste flows into the lake bringing with it various types of fresh water fish. In the salt water area to the north may be found the Desert Perch, a fish that lives in salt water. The Desert Perch, strange as it seems, can also live in fresh water.

Three Intersectional Games Headline Mid-Western Gridiron Program Today

Michigan Has Edge Over Cornell

Northwestern Will Meet Stanford; Ohio State Faces Vanderbilt.

Notre Dame Will Tackle Indiana; Purdue Foe of Minnesota.

The gridiron menu provides three outstanding intersectional games, a pair of rough-and-tumble battles between conference foes, and an important game for Notre Dame with Indiana.

The Cardinals of Stanford invade Chicago for a clash with Northwestern at Soldiers Field, while the big Red team from Cornell comes West to engage Michigan at Ann Arbor. Ohio State completes the intersectional list by taking on Vanderbilt at Columbus.

In the Big Ten, Purdue, ranked as one of the favorites to win the championship, comes to grips with the powerful Minnesota eleven at Minneapolis, while Illinois will find out how good Wisconsin is in meeting the Badgers at Champaign. Chicago will tackle Washington University at St. Louis.

Hawkeyes to Rest Up.

The other member of the Big Ten, the startling Hawkeyes of Iowa, will rest up for Wisconsin next week.

The battle between Northwestern and Stanford, attracting a crowd of upward of 40,000, promises to be a spectacular affair, as both teams use the Warner system of play. Coach "Tiny" Thornhill, of Stanford believes his Cardinals have the slight edge, but Northwestern, dented in its opening game with Iowa two weeks ago, is determined to be restored to good standing. The task before the Wildcats appears to be an impossible one, for the Stanford eleven is credited to be the best that has represented the Pacific Coast institution in a decade. Ollie Olson, the great punter of the Purple Wildcats, will call the signals from quarter back and has been instructed to kick the Cardinals dizzy.

Old Gridiron Rivalry.

Forty thousand followers of the Maize and Blue of Michigan will be in the Wolverine Stadium to see the renewal of one of the oldest intersectional football rivalries in the history of the sport when the 1932 champions of the Big Ten face Cornell. These schools started playing football against each other in 1889. It will be taken up where it dropped off in 1917 when a great Michigan team trampled the Red from Ithaca, 42 to 0.

Cornell, with less weight and experience than the Wolverines, may be in for a drubbing.

The game at Bloomington between Indiana and Notre Dame will reveal just what kind of a team Notre Dame will have to complete the rest of a stiff schedule. The warriors from South Bend got off to a bad start last week, barely holding Kansas to a tie. On the same afternoon the Hoosiers fought a tie with Minnesota. The Hoosiers long have awaited a victory over Notre Dame.

Both Wisconsin and Illinois have given indication of possessing power and deception in their early season games, and their battle at Champaign promises to be a thriller. The same goes for Purdue and Minnesota. The Boilermakers, if victorious over the Gophers, figure to have an excellent chance for the championship.

Chicago's up-and-coming team under Coach Clark Shaughnessy will get a real test in the game with Washington University at St. Louis.

ing the week, and are counted on to stop any plays that may come their way. Bill Whelan, back at center, and Johnny Hartnett, at guard, give the team a well-balanced defensive.

Two Are Reinstated.

The Jaspers' offense has been improved with the reinstatement of Larry Spellman at quarter back and Bill Pendergast at half back. Pendergast formerly did the signal calling, but Meehan can make better use of his talents at half back. Ed Bakanoaski, a promising sophomore, will alternate at one of the ball-carrying posts.

Manhattan's record for the season is slightly more impressive than that of its rival, the New Yorkers having bowled over Clarkson, and St. Bonaventure. Oglethorpe scored an upset over the Green gridders last week, winning, 6-0.

Georgetown walloped Mount St. Mary's in traditional style, opening the season, but suffered a 6-0 reverse at Buffalo last week, where it tangled with Canisius.

Howard Plays St. Paul At Walker Stadium

Because of the rain-soaked condition of the new sod on the Howard University football field, today's game between Howard and St. Paul Institute has been transferred to the Walker Stadium at Second and Que streets northwest, adjacent to the Dunbar High School. The game will be called at 2:30.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

THE CITY'S top-ranking bowlers spilled the maples at a fast clip in the National Capital League's twin bill on the Lucky Strike Alleys last night, toppling one old season's record into the discard. Jack Gooding of Judd and Detweiler team rolled a 447 set for the new season's record, with games of 138, 170 and 139. The winning team, Judd and Detweiler, took the odd game from the Star Service Station team. Gooding's feat last night now leaves him holding both high individual game and high individual sets for the season, having rolled a 176 game last week.

The Lucky Strike Barbers, with Johnny Anderson leading the way with a 394 set and Eddie Espey of the same team backing him up with a 387 set, took two out of three from Book of Washington. Sam Simon starred for the losers with a set of 375. The Barbers took high team set honors, amassing a total of 1,865 pins.

The Silver Spring Skating Rink quint with Astor Clarke showing the way with a 388 set took two out of three from the Temple Hand Laundry team. The winners spilled a total set of 1,858. Henry May, of the Laundry team, turned in a 383 set for second honors.

In the District League the Fountain Hams made a clean sweep of their match with the Lucky Strike team, winning all three games. Norman Schroth's set of 373 was high for the night, while Howard Campbell captured high individual game with a 155.

Charlie Bernhardt, of the Highway No. 2 team, of the District Government League, led the list of individual feats at the Arcadia alleys last night, toppling the maples for a 143 game and rolling 386 for high set. High team game and set also were carried away by Highway No. 2 quint with a game of 596 and 1,739 pins for the set.

The Design team of the Quartermasters League romped away with high team score and set of 537 and 1,503 respectively, at Columbia. Kennedy had high individual game with 141, and McGrady's 357 was high individual set. In the ladies' division of the Quartermasters League, Supply set the pace with 456 and 1,401. O'Dea's 113 and 302 were high for individual game and set.

The Arcadia was the scene of competition in the Federal Trade Commission and Building Contractors' League. In the Trade Commission League Mooers' 137 and 335 were high for individual game and set. The Eagles' 503 and 1,421 carried away team honors.

H. Hughes rolled out a nice 147 for high individual game, bowled by the Building Contractors. Reds Rhodes' 373 was individual set. High team game was rolled by Southern Asbestos, who toppled the pins for a 587. High team set of 1,643 was rolled by the D. C. Butchers' team.

Zaharias Battles Garibaldi Next

George Zaharias, the rassling Greek, again tops Joe Turner's Thursday night grappling card. He is slated to battle Gino Garibaldi, the Long Island grunter, next week at Washington Auditorium.

The fracas is labeled a grudge fight inasmuch as Zaharias was defeated in the ring by Garibaldi and on the way to the dressing room was handed a stiff uppercut for good measure that really sealed the decision.

Despite his unpopularity among local fandom, Zaharias' reputation as an upsetter of class A opponents can not be denied. Last June he pinned Hans Steinke and later staged a valiant stand against the champion of the circuit, Jim Londos. His victory over Ray Steele last week added to his laurels.

Senior Cycle Events Booked at Polo Field

Only the senior events in the District cycling championships will be run tomorrow, and the time has been advanced to 8 a. m., instead of 10 a. m., as previously announced. The change is made necessary by the playing of a polo game on the Potomac Park field, around which the races are to be run. The junior events will be held a week from tomorrow and the Century club races the week following.

Maryland Boasts Do-or-Die Spirit

team's fighting spirit and excellent morale largely helps offset its lack of experience, but it is experience that tells in the end. Fans coming out for the fray are particularly anxious to see Earl Widmyer, the Old Liners' speed king, who will show at one of the half-back posts.

Widmyer is well known in the South for his track feats, but his deeds on the gridiron are not so widespread. The Terps have another flashy back in Dick Nelson, who will do the signal calling, and will have a large share in the ball-carrying.

The remainder of the line-up will be Ennis and Bernie Buscher, ends; McLaughlin and Callahan tackles; Bradley and Simpson, guards; Webb, center, Nelson, quarter back; Yaeger and Widmyer, half backs; Sachs, full back.

2 Record Bass Catches Made Near Moorefield

Moorefield, W. Va., Oct. 13 (Spl.).—Two record bass catches for the season in the South Branch Valley were registered this week.

One was a specimen weighing 4 pounds 10½ ounces, caught by Arno Friddle at Fox's Eddy, near here. The other was caught by Lemuel Combs at Sycamore Bridge, near McNeill, and weighed 4 pounds 6 ounces.

Poloists to Vie For Crown Today

Third Cavalry Yellows to Face War Department in Potomac Park.

THE Third Cavalry Yellows will meet the War Department polo team in the final match of a six-team tournament today at 3 o'clock on the Potomac Park Polo Field. In the process of reaching the finals, the Yellows defeated the Marshall, Va., civilian team and the strong Artillery four, which had previously beaten the Third Cavalry Greens. The War Department team was called upon to beat the 101st Artillery aggregation to achieve a half interest in today's activities.

The consolation matches, involving the Third Cavalry Greens, the 101st Artillery and Marshall, will be played today also at 2 p. m., but they may be scheduled for the Fort Myer Field to preserve the turf on the Potomac Park Field for the final match.

Duquesne Beats West. Md., 13-0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 13 (U.P.).—Duquesne University chalked up its fifth straight triumph tonight when Elmer Layden's Night Riders defeated Western Maryland, 13 to 0.

Late in the first quarter, after Duquesne had advanced the ball to the Western Maryland 30, Half Back Al Deluca faded back, eluded a bevy of foes and arched a beautiful pass to Zanninelli, who caught the ball on the goal line and toppled over for the score. Zanninelli added the point with a perfect placement.

In the third period Duquesne advanced to the 6-yard line, and Deluca went over for the second score.

Western Maryland's attack was woefully weak, and they never were within Duquesne's 30-yard line.

Two Golfers Tied For Eastern Lead

Hackney and Gianferante Have 145 Totals.

Wayland, Mass., Oct. 13 (AP).—Putting for birdies on almost every green, Dave Hackney, of Lowell, today carded a 69, three under par for the rugged 7,000-yard Presidential course, to finish in a first-place tie with Jerry Gianferante, young Lexington professional, at the halfway point in the 72-hole Eastern Open Golf championship.

Hackney's second round was the best exhibition of golf that the tourney, which attracted six of the ten U. S. Ryder Cup players and a host of other stars, has seen and it gave him a 36-hole total of 145, which Gianferante matched by shooting a 70 after going to the turn in 37, one over par.

Paul Runyon, of White Plains, N. Y., gained a 73 on his second tour to total 146. Johnny Farrell of Mamaroneck, N. Y., a 77, for a two-day total of 147, the same as that of Leo Diegel, whose 71 pulled him well up in the van.

Pegler Sees

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—It is hardly likely that any more large stadia will be built in this country within the life of persons now living. The customer-capacity of the 50 foremost existing plants is about 3,000,000 and this figure does not include any of the thousands of highly optimistic high school football arenas or indoor athletic theaters, collegiate or high school, which were built in the time of the boom.

Many of these plants were built with public funds or by the abuse of public credit. The figure excludes also about half of the major league ball parks, all of the horse plants, the Indianapolis motor speedway, all minor league ball yards and Madison Square Garden and all its branch stores, subsidiaries and independent imitations in various cities. Probably an accurate count of the seating capacities of all outdoor and indoor arenas, suitable for athletic or sporting spectacles, which now exist, would disclose that there are facilities for parking as much as one-tenth of the entire population of the continental U. S. A.

Mournful Situation.

Box-office statistics of the last few years give a clear and rather mournful indication that these facilities are much more than sufficient for the demand. The stadium promoters, including, in many cases, local public officials and in many other cases predatory high-pressure promoters and in some cases a combination of both, have built far into the future.

Two of the most embarrassing monuments to goofy civic ambitions and pride which rear their high walls against the sky as the winds moan through their tunnels and iron-work these autumn days are the Sesquicentenial Stadium in Philaphia and the Cleveland Municipal Stadium, seating 125,000 and 110,000, respectively, for a prize fight. The Philadelphia stadium was filled once, in 1926, when Gene Tunney took the heavyweight championship of the world from Jack Dempsey. Otherwise it has been a grand example of the dumb enthusiasm of the go-getter. It was built in defiance of the fact that the University of Pennsylvania at that very time had a huge and growing arena, much more accessible to the customers and otherwise more suitable, whose seating capacity finally has reached 76,000.

Flop for Baseball.

Cleveland Municipal Stadium was imposed upon the mass of the taxpayers largely by the influence of a group of aggressive business men who desired to increase the value of much real estate which they owned in the vicinity of the site. It has been a flop even for major league baseball, and the Cleveland Ball Club, which had a part in the promotion of this public undertaking, may yet abandon its right to use the park for the ball games and move back to the old-fashioned baseball quarters at Dunn Field, some distance from the business center, for motives of economy. The Cleveland municipal plant is so large that a crowd of 3,000 or 5,000 customers, which would be a pay-crowd at the old ball-yard is lost and looks lonesome within its vast spaces. The customers do not like to feel lonesome. Customer-phychology is very strange and the best minds of the sport industry recognize that a patron who finds himself gazing around at great expanses of unoccupied seats is likely to conclude that he is devoting his time and enthusiasm to a dead one and quit coming. In the Dunn Field a small crowd looks much larger and crowds draw crowds.

Moreover, in the Municipal Stadium of Cleveland many long flies which would be home runs in conventional major league surroundings are just flies and put-outs. The customer-appeal of the home run is substantially proven by the existence of the Yankee Stadium in New York, which was built on the proceeds of Babe Ruth's home runs.

Tactfully Arranged.

In building this arena, which can hold about 70,000 for a baseball game, Col. Jake Ruppert's architects tactfully arranged their layout so that the Babe, a right-field hitter, would not see any long flies of the familiar Ruth home-run type converted into put-outs. The gave the Babe a moderately high right-field barrier to shoot at, and his home-run production proceeded and the customers continued to attend in large bodies.

Dunn Field in Cleveland is much smaller and less modern than the magnificent municipal liability which was built on the lake front, but it had its home-run appeal. The Municipal Stadium in Baltimore is another unfortunate mistake of the same kind. It was filled once when the Army and Navy played there, with a crowd of about 75,000. Knute Rockne's Notre Dame football team also drew several pay-crowds, but never were able to fill the place, possibly because the customers were not strong enough to put up a thorough contest against the team whose scrub team was generally made up of athletes who would have been famous stars elsewhere.

Shrewd Promoter.

The shrewdest and most successful promoter of gigantic arenas that the era of the boom produced in this country was Humbert J. Fugazy, the prize-fight producer, of New York. Mr. Fugazy, in his time, has constructed some arenas for which the Philadelphia sesqui plant would have been nothing but a very diminutive-scale model. But he always built his arenas on the top of a table in the back room of some little beer store along toward the small hours of the morning.

He would draw beautiful turrets and portals on the tabletop with a finger moistened in a puddle of beer, and when he had his stadium done the waiter would come along with his bar rag, and, with one big, ruthless swipe, wipe it out again. It never cost Mr. Fugazy more than the price of a few dozen scoops of beer to build an arena, and even this was not a loss by any means. He always got his beer.

Sandlot League Title Games Sunday

Millers and Stantons to Meet in Twin Bill for Championship.

THE opening gun in the unlimited championship series of the Capital City League will be fired Sunday, when Miller Furniture Co., winner of the first half, and Stanton Cleaners, champions of the second half, cross bats in a double-header. The games will be played on the South Ellipse diamond, starting at 1 o'clock. In the event a third game is necessary, it will be played the following Sunday. The best two out of three will decide the championship.

Because of the lateness of the season, rival managers agreed to play the twin bill in an effort to settled the title. A tie for the honors in the second half involving the Stantons and Griffith-Blue Coals prolonged the race.

At 11 o'clock, also on the South Ellipse, the Montrose Athletic Club and Washington Maid Midgets will clash in a game for the championship of their class. One game will decide the title.

Virginia Departs To Face Columbia

Martin, Injured, Will Not Be Able to Play.

University, Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—A chilling rain and gusty weather kept the University of Virginia football squad indoors today as it completed training for tomorrow's battle with Columbia at New York.

The players embarked tonight for Columbia after a brief indoor practice. Harry Martin, star quarter back who was injured in the game with Ohio State, will see the Columbia game as a spectator. Athletic officials said there was a possibility that Capt. Burger, another casualty, would be kept out of the game.

16 Contestants Enter In Motorcycle Races

Sixteen entries have been received and more are expected for the second hill-climbing motorcycle event to be held by the National Capital Motorcycle Club near Wheaton, Md., tomorrow, weather permitting Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New York and Wisconsin are among the States contributing entries.

The boys will be racing against time, as determined by an electrical timing device accurate to the hundredth of a second. The riding will be over a 150-foot course at about a 65 per cent grade. Five events are scheduled, two amateur, two professional and one Class C, for stock models. Every rider will be allowed two rides in each race.

Races are scheduled to start at 1:30 o'clock, and the course is located about 2 miles beyond Wheaton. Officials of the club are arranging to have markers indicating the route to be followed from Silver Spring direct to the race course.

Mr. and Mrs. Vare Win Golf Crowns

Beat Kerr, Mrs. Shriver at Hot Springs.

Hot Springs, Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—After his wife had shown him how to do it, Edwin H. Vare, jr., of Philadelphia, went out this afternoon and won the championship in the annual fall golf tournament at Hot Springs.

Mrs. Vare, the former Glenna Collett, outdriving her opponent consistently defeated Mrs. Beverley H. Shriver, of Pittsburgh, 6 and 5, for the women's championship, but her husband had a harder job whipping John J. Hicks Kerr, of Richmond, 1 up.

Playing in the rain, Kerr held a 2 up advantage after 18 holes, but Vare, with the weather more favorable, found his game in the afternoon. They reached the thirty-sixth hole all even and Vare won the match with a birdie 3 after hitting a spoon shot withing eight feet of the pin. Kerr was short with his iron.

Earl Clark Planning School of Baseball

Earl Clark, former Boston Braves outfielder, will conduct a baseball school during the winter as part of his activities as coach of the Silver Spring Athletic Club.

The Silver Spring A. C., organized about 7 months ago, won the junior baseball championship of Montgomery County this year with 48 victories and two tie games. Its membership now numbers 50, and headquarters are located in its own clubhouse in Branwill Park.

The club will start basket ball practice next week at the Silver Spring High School. All boys interested are requested to attend the weekly meetings of the club on Fridays.

Detroit's Aerial Game Routs Presidents, 14-0

Detroit, Oct. 13 (AP).—University of Detroit's aerial attack proved too much for the sturdy Presidents of Washington and Jefferson here tonight. The Detroit eleven smashed over touchdowns in the second and fourth periods to win, 14 to 0, in a night game before 15,000 spectators. Doug Nott and Dick Lutz, half backs, scored the touchdowns.

Bridgewater Foe Today of American U.

Eagles Are Confident of Repeating Triumph of Last Season.

STILL smarting under the defeat inflicted last week by Hampden-Sydney, American University's squad will leave this morning at 8 o'clock for Bridgewater, Va., where it will oppose Bridgewater at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Eagles are confident of stopping the Red Devils, whom they defeated, 33-0, last season.

Coach Walter H. Young lectured the squad yesterday afternoon and gave a blackboard drill in the gym. He elected to forego regular practice in view of the bad weather and possibility that it would lead to injuries.

Bridgewater has its 1932 eleven back intact with the exception of two players. Capable reserves have stepped into the vacancies and the Virginians will present a formidable line-up.

Buffington and Gutteridge, ends; Crampton and Randle, tackles; Esper and Hartwell, guards, and Duckworth, center, will comprise American's forward wall. Coach Young was undecided on the back field, although Borsari, a veteran, is certain to be at the signal-calling post.

Clemson Holds Colonials to 0-0 Tie

G. W. Eleven Outplayed in Second Half as 10,000 Watch.

Plotnicki terminated the drive, smearing Lynn on an attempted reverse 5 yards behind the line of scrimmage.

This assault on the District aggregation's goal followed one early in the third quarter which bogged down on G. W.'s 8-yard line. A pass from Leemans intended for Parrish, that fell into the eager hands of Cathcart, started the fireworks.

Clemson clearly outplayed its opponent in the final period, when it chalked up seven of its ten-first downs, one more than George Washington made. The invaders reeled off gains totaling 146 yards when they abandoned their precautions and really opened up.

Interference Ragged.

George Washington's bungling interference prevented the Colonials' backs from getting into the clear for any appreciable gains. Time and time again the interference clogged up holes opened by the line and forced the runner to seek another opening. Near the end of the fray, Leemans appeared to successfully extricate himself from a group of Clemson tacklers after receiving a punt, only to trip over the heels of a teammate attempting to run interference.

Three of G. W.'s regular ball toters witnessed the game from the bench — McCarver, Bomba and Baker. With victory so near and yet so far, they could have been used to good advantage.

25 Marathoners Seek Record at World Fair

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Twenty-five "iron men" of the cinder paths and pavements will make an assault on the world's record for the 30 kilometer run before thousands of World's Fair visitors tomorrow.

It may be an old-fashioned race with the "hounds" chasing the "hare" as the outstanding favorite in the chase is Juan Zabala, known the world over as the "Hare of the Pampas."

Many of America's foremost marathon stars will complete with Zabala tomorrow. Among them are Anthony Massey, Pittsburgh; George Roland, New York; Joseph Wiley, Wilmington, Del.; Allen Stalnaker, Chicago; August Sloboda, Chicago; Emmet Crosbie, Baltimore, and two stars from Newcastle, Pa., Frank Jerry and Alfred W. Snyder.

Greenbrier Defeats Richmond Frosh, 2-0

Richmond, Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—A safety in the third period gave Greenbrier Military Academy a 2-to-0 decision over the Unversity of Richmond freshmen in a hard-fought football game here today.

The Richmond eleven, after holding for downs on the 2-yard line, lost the ball game when Robertson, moving back to kick out of danger, stepped on the end zone line.

Previously both teams had wasted a couple of scoring threats.

Missouri Youth Dies From Grid Infection

St. Louis, Oct. 13 (AP).—David Tully, jr., center on the McBride High School football team, died here today from septic pneumonia and pleurisy which developed after a skinned elbow became infected. The elbow was skinned in practice last week and the injury later was aggravated during a game with another school.

Mercurys Practice.

All Mercury players are requested to report for practice Sunday at 10:30 a. m. at Four-and-a-half and Miami avenue southwest. Tuck Daglish, Grant, Webb and Evans are requested to be on hand. The Mercurys play the Maryland A. C. Sunday at 2:30 at Boyer's Field in Seat Pleasant.

Florida Ready To Encounter N. C. State

Visiting Eleven Favored in Southern Conference Contests.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—The Southern Conference spotlight focused tonight on three points on a triangle down in North Carolina, where much of the heavy firing will be heard in Dixie's football warfare tomorrow.

The thick of the fray will center around an area about the size of a dime on most wall maps with Duke meeting Tennessee at Durham, North Carolina facing Georgia at Chapel Hill and N. C. State battling Florida at Raleigh a few hours later in a night game.

If history elects to repeat, Tennessee will whip Duke after a great battle, North Carolina State will subdue the Gators and the Tarheels will fight Georgia's Bull Dogs to a tie. That's what happened last year.

Visiting Clubs Favored.

What happens tomorrow will be another story, with the visiting elevens favored in the foreword and preface.

Duke's meeting with Tennessee's nationally recognized eleven will bring together two undefeated teams, each seeking the championship of its own conference and each looking for added laurels outside the bounds of its own league.

Duke's forewall, led by Freddie Crawford, a tackle who has few peers in the South, should stack up well with the Volunteer line. But the Blue Devils haven't faced a task this season as difficult as stopping the renowned Beattie Feathers and his sensational running mate, Deke Brackett, Tennessee quarter back.

North Carolina's eleven, coming right along and looking better each week, has been meeting progressively tougher opposition. Georgia will bring up a team that already has stamped itself as a Southeastern Conference contender, but the Tarheels, with an array of smart ball carriers and a line that is fast reaching its stride are conceded a good chance to turn back the invaders. The passing arm of Alan McDonald, who has been promised a place in the Carolina starting back field, may be a big help to the Tarheels.

N. C. State Line Question.

North Carolina State, knocked almost out of the Southern Conference running by Clemson's Tigers, will need much better line play to stop Florida's aggressive veteran team. Capt. Mope Cumiskey and Bob McQuage probably will be called on to do a large part of the ball toting for State.

All of the other Southern Conference teams, with the exception of South Carolina's Gamecocks, who will be idle, will take to the road.

Clemson clashed with George Washington at Washington tonight. Virginia Tech, one of the conference favorites, will play a strong William and Mary team at Richmond, while Virginia Military, defeated in three starts, but heartened by the return of Quarter Back Billy Smith to the line-up, will battle Davidson at Davidson.

Virginia will meet Columbia at New York.

National Trainers Beat Devitt, 9-6

National Training defeated Devitt Prep in a hard-fought game yesterday at the Trainers' field, 9-6.

The Trainers opened up the scoring in the first period when a Devitt back was tackled behind his own goal line. In the third quarter, Otis Bunch, former Washington-Lee High gridder, skirted right end for a tally, but the National lads came back in the fourth to sew up the game when Lee Kiski, half back, slashed off tackle for the score, and added the extra point.

Survey Urges Private Liquor Sales Agency

New Rockefeller Report Advocates Creation of Corporation.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Creation of a private liquor sales corporation as a possible modification of the Rockefeller survey's proposed State liquor authority plan was outlined today in a supplementary report.

This would eliminate direct retail sales by the authority, the report said. A plan for establishing agencies to sell spirits for on-premises consumption also was discussed.

"The sales corporation would be set up under a special corporate charter," the survey said. "There would be a small board of directors, consisting in part of persons elected by the stockholders and receiving a small fee for each meeting and in part of the members of the alcohol control authority, ex officio.

"Predominant voting strength should be placed with the authority representatives. Provision should be made for a managing director. * * *

Curb on Stock Sales.

"Cumulative limited dividend stock, paying not in excess of 5 per cent under present conditions, should be authorized to finance the operations. The original sale and subsequent transfers of stock should be restricted."

Profits beyond dividends, the report said, should go to the alcohol control authority.

"This solution," it continued, "might be satisfactory to those who wish rigid control but do not want the Government to 'enter the liquor business.'"

Discussing on-premises consumption, the report said:

"Public opinion in some States will undoubtedly demand the sale of all kinds of alcoholic beverages in hotels and restaurants. Many hotel guests, if denied a cocktail with their meals, will buy a whole bottle of spirits.

Price-fixing Suggested.

"We can not blind our eyes to the popularity of cocktails in America. The growth of the cocktail habit has accompanied prohibition, and has indeed been stimulated by it."

The State authority, the survey said, would regulate the sale by fixing prices and hours and even monthly quotas of the quantities of beverages to be purchased.

Plan to Gain Control Of Air Line Denied

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—E. O. McDonnell, president of National Aviation Corp., today denied reports that his company and other interests were seeking control of Pan American Airways Corp.

"To my knowledge," McDonnell said, "there is no effo[rt] on the part of any particular aviation interest to gain control of this company."

Railway Leaders Argue Fare Cuts

Western Group Plans 2-Cent a Mile Rate to and From Pacific Coast.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—Eastern railway executives held another long session on the question of reducing passenger rates today, but failed to reach an agreement.

It was expected in some quarters that Eastern roads would assent to a cut in the present base tariff of 3.6 cents a mile, expediting the move for a uniform revision.

The Western Passenger Association, meeting in Chicago, announced passenger rates of 2 cents a mile to and from the Pacific Coast within nine-month limits. The rates will be effective December 1 if the Interstate Commerce Commission approves.

3 Children Left $300,000 by Crane

New York Banker's Will Favors Son, Daughters.

New York, Oct. 13 (AP).—The will of George F. Crane, former banker and senior warden of Trinity Parish, who died September 24, was filed today, disposing of an estate estimated at more than $300,000.

Two children, Mrs. Katherine A. Montgomery, of New York, and William D. Crane, of Santa Barbara, Calif., were bequeathed $100,000 each. Another daughter, Mrs. Mallie C. Flanders, of Malden, Mass., was left $50,000 and realty in Massachusetts.

$5,000 on Heads Of Sheriff Killers

Reward to Be Given for Trio Dead or Alive.

Lima, Ohio, Oct. 13 (AP).—A $5,000 reward was posted by the Allen County commissioners today for the capture, dead or alive, of three men who last night killed Sheriff Jess L. Sarber and freed John Dillinger, notorious bank robber.

Possemen blocked all roads and concentrated their search in this district, believing the desperadoes had found a nearby hiding place.

Bertillion data identified the trigger man as Harry Pierpoint, one of ten convicts who escaped the Indiana State Prison, September 26.

Drys Attack Pennsylvania Repeal Vote

Injunction to Prevent Ballot on Convention Delegates Sought.

Harrisonburg, Oct. 13 (AP).—Dry leaders today began action to prevent a repeal vote in Pennsylvania, one of the six States whose November 7 elections may send a national repeal over the top.

They filed in Dauphin County Court a petition for a temporary injunction to bar election of delegates to a State convention to cast Pennsylvania's vote December 5.

G. W. Hartman, Harrisburg, and Gerald Disney, Cheltenham, filed the petition. The action is supported by Dr. William Sheafe Chase, Washington, D. C., superintendent of the International Reform Federation.

The petition alleges the delegates, 15 chosen by wet organizations and 15 by dry organizations in the State, are not representative of the electorate; that repeal of the eighteenth amendment is a Federal and not a State question, and that the convention is not a deliberative body.

A permanent injunction would eliminate Pennsylvania from the group whose conventions are scheduled for December 5, a date repeal leaders view as that on which the amendment will be officially stricken from the Constitution.

Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, named as defendant in the injunction petition, said the names of the convention delegates already have been certified to county commissioners for printing on ballots.

Dry leaders said similar action probably will be taken in Ohio.

Prize Beauty Sues Indian Husband

Norma Smallwood "Miss America" in 1926.

Pawhuska, Okla., Oct. 13 (AP).—Norma Smallwood, of Tulsa, won the "Miss America" contest in Atlantic City in 1926, and her husband, Tom Gilcrease, Creek Indian, are the principals in an unusual divorce action filed here.

Gilcrease named the blue-eyed beauty's mother, Mrs. Mahala Smallwood, as a codefendant in the first petition, in which he seeks custody of the 4-year-old son. The Gilcreases were married in 1928, when Norma was 20.

In a cross-petition, Mrs. Gilcrease likewise asks for the boy, and also $500 a month temporary alimony until a property settlement can be reached.

Firing Squad Kills Italy's 'Bluebeard'

Convicted Murderer of Three Women Executed.

Serviatti was tied to a chair and shot in the spine by a squad of carabiniere. A huge crowd witnessed his death.

He was sentenced July 7 on 11 counts, all connected with the mysterious disappearance and subsequently confirmed deaths of three young women who had given him their affections and life savings.

Pilot Saves Farmer.

Springfield, Mo. (U.P.).—Pilot Jack Wade saved the life of a farmer at the municipal airport when he zoomed his craft suddenly as the man walked in front of the plane. The farmer, witnesses said, evidently failed to hear the landing siren.

Husbands Live Longer Than Bachelors, Study Reveals

Young Married Men Are Healthier, Too; Says Dr. Willcox.

New proof for the old contention that married life, especially for men, is conducive to health and longevity is contained in statistics showing the dath rate for husbands is lower than that of bachelors.

For ages between 35 and 45, the death rate for husbands is half that for bachelors. Between 25 and 65, it is about two-thirds that of bachelors. These conclusions are shown in a study of Census Bureau statistics, made by Dr. Walter Willcox, of Cornell University.

Young husbands, he said, are doubtless healthier, on the average, than single men of the same age.

"Widowers as well as husbands have been through the selection process of marriage," he said, "and yet the death rate of widowers is about the same as bachelors and much higher than the mortality of husbands."

Walt Mason, Himself

Age and Poverty.

Three hundred years ago today Ben Johnson in his bedroom lay, and, on a board across his knees, he wrote sad stories of disease, of suffering and want and care, and desolation everywhere, and asked his friends to kindly send a shilling that his grief might end. Throughout the reign of good King James Ben prospered well in all his games; he wrote his masques and plays and things, and junketed with queens and kings, and found his credit would suffice, if he should haply lack the price. By evening in the Mermaid Inn, he filled himself with sack and gin, and Shakespeare, Decker and that bunch were there to add a pleasant punch. Ben Johnson was a wise old boy, and learning was his pride and joy; no other man on Britain's shore had read so much of ancient lore, and none remembered half so well the things the sage had to tell. Yet he forgot the fateful truth that there's an end to buoyant youth; that age come on, with fleeing years, to bards and clerks and auctioneers. He blew himself with princely zeal, and had his hangers-on at heel, and though he was considered wise, he drank to folly "with his eyes." And so, 300 years ago, he writhed in misery and woe, and wrote his little begging notes, entreating friends to send him groats, that he might buy a can of soup or candles to light up his coop. We haven't learned a lot since then; there are a million lads like Ben who can not grasp the vital truth that there's an end to strength and youth.

Plan Drafted For Reopening Savings Bank

A new plan for reopening the United States Savings Bank has been drafted, Theodore S. Grape, chairman of a depositors' committee, announced last night.

Mr. Grape told a meeting of Central Business Men's Association has committee has "a workable proposal which should reopen the bank on a basis of fairness and protection to all interests."

The chairman declined to divulge details at present. He cautioned depositors, however, to "scrutinize with great care any plan submitted to them."

Arthur Clarendon Smith, association president, criticized a clause in an agreement sent to all depositors by Col. Wade H. Cooper, bank president. The agreement submitted by Cooper called on all depositors to consent to reopening under a plan which would release 65 per cent of their deposits.

Proposal Not Voted Upon.

The paragraph opposed by Mr. Smith read:

"In the event any changes in the terms and conditions hereof are necessary to meet the requirements of the Comptroller of the Currency or for other reason, you are hereby authorized to make such changes without canceling or annulling this agreement, which is to remain in force notwithstanding such changes."

Mr. Smith interpreted the agreement as meaning it would authorize the bank president to negotiate for reopening under some altered plan which might result in payment of less than the 65 per cent stipulated.

A proposal that depositors be advised to refrain from signing the agreement was considered, but was not put to a vote. Several members suggested the matter was strictly within the province of the depositors' committee.

Grape outlined efforts to ararnge a compromise between Col. Cooper and Treasury officials. He said such attempts have failed.

Treasury officials recently proposed a plan for reopening, but Col. Cooper took the case to the District Supreme Court, where it is pending.

Cooper Suit Announced.

Suit of depositors of the closed Park Savings Bank against stockholders, directors and officers of that institution was postponed until October 25 in District Supreme Court yesterday.

The suit arose out of contention the bank's charter had expired in 1929, and from that time on the bank was operated on a partnership basis. If the latter contention prevails, the defendants will be made liable for entire shortage of the bank, estimated at $2,200,000.

Cooper Suit Answered.

Robert S. Stunz, former executive officer, committed suicide with a shortage of $1,600,000 about to be revealed. A later loss of more than $400,000 was written down because of "bad loans" authorized by Stunz.

Meanwhile, Treasury Department officials answered the suit of Col. Wade H. Cooper, of the United States Bank. They asked that the suit be dismissed because they were within their discretionary powers when they rejected Col. Cooper's plan for reopening.

Col. Cooper is suing to enforce adoption of his plan to reopen his bank. The suit is scheduled to come up within three weeks.

Historic Posts Face Removal

Standards at End of West Executive Avenue Are Traffic Problem.

The historic stone posts at the end of West Executive avenue near the entrance to the White House may have to yield before the onward march of modern traffic requirments—but it will take an act of Congress to move them.

At the request of President Roosevelt, the installation of traffic lights at East and West Executive avenues and Pennsylvania avenue is being sudied.

For years the imposing posts have been silent sentinels of the Executive Mansion. Historic parades and epochal events have occurred within their shadows. They were erected by congressional act. Now they may have to go, branded as menances to pedestrain traffic.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer is studying the plans. If they are allowed to stand, "repeat lights" will be installed to aid the vision of northbound traffic, which would be obscured by the posts.

1,000 Abandon Strike in U. S. Building Row

Settlement of Radiator Enclosure Feud to Be Made Later.

A labor dispute, which on September 15 threw 1,000 men out of employment and stopped a $40,000 weekly pay roll, was settled yesterday with announcement that work on the new Labor I. C. C. buildings will be resumed Monday.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, New York, head of the national labor board, which brought the presidents of the carpenters and iron workers unions together, said the job of installing radiator inclosures will be untouched pending a final agreement between the two trades.

P. J. Morrin and William L. Hutcheson, heads of the iron workers and carpenters, respectively, agreed to order their men back to work.

Representing the Government at the conference were Senator Wagner and Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who Wednesday labeled the tieup over $800 worth of work a "farce."

Fear was expressed yesterday that the tentative agreement will not mean the end of the trouble at the connected buildings, which were to have been completed in February. Sheet metal workers have put in a claim to build the radiator inclosures.

Another obstruction is the ironworkers' demand for a four-hour day, fought by contractors. Several firms holding contracts at the Labor-I. C. C. Buildings have suspended work on their other Federal jobs here and are preparing to resist the demand indefinitely.

Youth Held for Theft.

Randall Pinkney, 17, colored, of 427 N street northwest, charged with stealing $116.44 worth of copper wire from the plant of the Western Electric Co., North Capitol and Pierce streets northwest, was held in $3,000 bail for the grand jury yesterday after he pleaded guilty in Police Court.

Bud Chosen Best Among Thousands at Exhibit in Museum.

A very small but perfect yellow rose was chosen the best of thousands of roses of all colors and sizes at the Potomac Rose Society's show held yesterday at the National Museum.

All entries were grown in or near Washington. The purpose of the exhibit was to show which roses are best adapted to the climate and soil of this region.

Some Grown in Open.

All roses entered in the amateur classes were grown in the open, most in small garden patches, although the care the amateurs took in preparing their exhibitions equalled in most cases the professionals in the commercial classes.

One large table was devoted to dark red roses, whose owners proudly explained they fertilized the plants with dried blood mixed with water in order to get a rich, dark color. Other shades—pinks, yellows, and salmons—were fertilized with more prosaic chemicals.

The show will be open today from 9:30 to 4:30.

Prize-winners Listed.

Among the prize-winners yesterday were Mrs. V. R. Alfaro, Spring Valley; Louis Reed, Gaithersburg, Md.; P. C. Tuttel, Alexandria; Mrs. Louis Dravelle, Bethesda, Md.; Mrs. William Earle, Fairfax Court House, Va.; Mrs. A. Richards, Alexandria; Mrs. G. Freeland Peter, Bethesda, and Mrs. W. L. Smith, Mrs. S. E. Scott, Mrs. J. L. Bishop, W. H. Youngman, Mrs. George A. Wold, Mrs. G. H. Gannaway, W. T. Betts, all of Washington.

Idle "Actors" Miss Good Home—Eat too Much.

If a troupe of actors out of work for the season did not have such tremendous appetites they might have found a place as guests at the National Zoological Park.

Just after a summer on the boards—they appeared at the Steel Pier at Atlantic City—the coterie tried to get a place at the Zoo with free board and room.

An elephant or a lion or tiger is not in it when it comes to having a costly appetite, they say.

$40,000 Fire Sweeps Hay Storage Plant

Dickey Warehouse Turned Into Torch in Three-Alarm Blaze.

Offices and storage pits of the Dickey Brothers Coal, Hay & Feed Co., Kenilworth avenue northeast, were destroyed in a spectacular three-alarm fire last night.

V. Calvert Dickey, president of the company, estimated the damage at $40,000. He said it was covered partially by insurance.

The blaze was discovered by a watchman, Charles A. Blizzard, as he made his 9 o'clock rounds. Tons of highly inflammable hay and grains were stored in the building.

The fire apparently started in the hay lofts. It gained rapid headway and was beyond control before the arrival of firemen. Flames were visable throughout the Northeast section. Smoke spread over an area of several blocks, attracting hundreds of spectators.

A thick fog hampered firemen.

Two men are awaiting electrocution at the District Jail for the murder of a colored watchman at the Dickey warehouse last Jnauary. The watchman, Williams Sims, 65, was killed with a hammer.

Independents Block District Milk Accord

Refuse to Agree to Three-Price Plan for Producers.

Negotiations in the milk marketing agreement for the District reached an impasse yesterday when affiliated independent distributors refused to agree to a three-price plan for producers.

The independents clashed with affiliates of the National Dairy Products Corporation and the independent Thompson Dairy, which favor three prices to producers. At a meeting in the offices of Roger Whiteford, attorney for the Chestnut Farms, the National Dairy affiliates and Thompson "favored in principle" the proposal of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association.

"Abuses" to Be Cited.

Elwood H. Seal, special investigator for the Senate Milk Investigating Committee, today will lay before George N. Peck, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, "abuses that have been revealed in his inquiry."

The indenpendents, who distribute approximately 22 per cent of the Capital milk, have united in supporting a one-price plan to be based on production costs. These costs, they suggest, should be determined by a survey by the A. A. A.

All distributors will meet Monday with representatives of the producers" association and final attempt will be made to adjust the differences. The code, as proposed, would give the dairy farmer an increase of three cents a gallon on fluid and surplus milk.

Code Proposal Discussed.

The proposed code was informally discussed yesterday by representatives of the producers and officials of the A. A. A. There was no agreement as to when the agreement will be formally presented for adoption.

Seal will address Loudoun County producers today. They are forming a protective association to inquire into the operation of their association.

Speller Finds Bee "Traitor"

Might Have Cost Him $5 But Prize Chance Never Existed.

"Traitorous" might have cost Ernest Cogan, Tech High School senior, $5 last night. It all happened this way:

The Ladies Aid Society of the First Methodist Protestant Church was holding a spelling bee in the Sunday school room, Fourth street between E and G streets southeast. Fifteen contestants took the platform. One by one they were eliminated until only Cogan and J. L. Bixler, Government employe in the Immigration Service of the Department of Labor, were left.

Each stumbled but came through with the correct spelling until Cogan came to "traitorous. T-r-a-t-o. Cogan was eliminated. Charles W. Guthrie, Shakespearian actor and the announcer, kept asking Bixler how to spell more words. Bixler spelled two dogen more correctly. The judges, Miss Amy S. King, Miss Mary Tate and Miss Ethel Waters, local school teachers, decided he had done enough for the money.

The five dollar bill was presented to Bixler. Then it was discovered that Cogan, being a resident of Northwest, instead of Southeast as the rules said the winner must be, hadn't been eligible for the prize. But, he said, "it was a lot of fun anyway."

$1,500 Bond Ordered For Robbery Suspect

Walter Perry, 24, colored, of Durham, N. C., was held for the grand jury yesterday on $1,500 bond when he pleaded not guilty to an attempted robbery charge in Police Court.

Bums Rebel!

Demand Better Shelter; 10 Find It in Pullmans.

Knights of the road are demanding better living quarters under the "new deal," it was revealed in Police Court yesterday.

Taxi Dancing Banned in New Police Rules

Revised Regulations Win Tentative Approval of Commissioners.

Taxi dancing is prohibited in revised police regulations submitted to the District Commissioners yesterday by a special committee and tentatively approved.

The ban on dance halls which charge for each dance and cater to men only was inserted by order of the commissioners following demands by women's organizations. Prosecutions have been made in several cases under District statutes.

The revised regulations will be printed within a few weeks. Many obsolete rules have been eliminated.

Fire Marshal Lauber compiled new fire prevention regulations, some of which have been recently acquired under the license act. They set forth, among other things, requirements before permission is given to install oil heating plants.

Regulations governing hack stands have been eliminated, as this control has passed to the Public Utilities Commission.
